“and He has made me as His chosen arrow”

ISAIAH 49:2

THE ANCIENT INSTRUMENTS of the arrow, bow, quiver and target are symbols of the essence of Catholic high school education.

We students are arrows of God. For four years we have been shaped and have been sharpened to careful perfection that we might serve the Archer well. As the quiver furnishes the arrows, the faculty imparts wisdom. As the bow gives force to the arrow, studies influence the course we take, and give impetus to our success. Without our teachers we are blunt arrows, for they are the source of our knowledge and prudence, directing us to make a mark in the world. God uses us as His weapons to strike out evil and to penetrate the shield of hatred. With bodies disciplined, minds enriched and characters strengthened, we now take our place in the path toward salvation, and, for God's glory, serve Him as His chosen arrows.

The Bishop of Rome

HIS HOLINESS
POPE PAUL VI

Our Holy Father, Paul VI, Vicar of Christ and Supreme Pontiff, guards and directs the Mystical Body toward the Divine Will of God. As Christ's successor on earth, he can be no less than a dove of peace in a world shattered by the outrages of war and ignorance. Pope Paul VI, spiritual leader of all Catholics and ambassador of good will for the Catholic Church, fulfills Christ's command to preach the Gospel and bring the faith to every creature.

The Church, as a complex organization, has delegated many of its duties and powers to the bishops of the world, who are the successors of the Apostles. Possessing the fullness of the priesthood, the bishops zealously fulfill the wishes of the Pope in their respective dioceses. As Bishop of Brooklyn, Bishop McEntegart makes available to the people of his diocese the means by which they can live a Christian life and attain their spiritual goals.

With complete faith in Christ and an earnest desire to provide the best possible means for the sanctification of his parishioners, our rector, Father Renehan, continually proves himself a competent administrator and trusted friend. The excellent organization and maintenance of this large parish is the tremendous work which commands his total dedication and energetic spirit. He applies his distinctive talents to our many celebrations and school functions, imparting to each a special dignity and leaving us with an inspiring message. For all these things we can never be sufficiently grateful.

For the past eight years the complex task of directing our school and providing for the educational and spiritual development of the student body has been entrusted to our principal, Sister Stanislaus. Her love of Christ, coupled with charity to all, is the spirit behind the administration of our school.

Through Sister's sympathetic understanding of youth's needs and problems, an example is set for the faculty who offer time and energy, as well as knowledge, to prepare us for our role in the world.

STUDIES

To further our understanding of the Catholic Faith and to intensify our love for Christ are the main purposes of our four-year religion course. As we follow the Church through her persecutions and triumphs, we grow in Christian spirit. Learning to live our faith is perhaps the most important and most rewarding aspect of our religious life.

The Mass, the sacraments and prayer serve as the three stepping stones to the grace which will bring us closer to our eternal goal. As we come to the conclusion of our formal religious instructions, we are willing and anxious to enter the world as apostles of Christ and to extend our Christian belief to all corners of the earth.

To know Him is to love Him . . . Bible study proves intensely absorbing to Ann Kennedy, Eileen Murray, Nadia Kenul, Diane Koehler and Anita Buono. Sister's explanation helps them to find Christ through the Sacred Scriptures.

Lighting the way for Christ . . . An ideal preparation for the coming of Christ is shown by Linda Majewski and Carol Ann Cooper as they ready the Advent wreath. Each day after the lighting ceremony, they and their classmates recite special prayers until Christmas.

From God to man . . . With Christ as its head, the hierarchy as His instruments and the liturgy as a source of divine grace, the Church exists as a perfect society. Michaela Smith points out to the class the formation of the Church as a living organization.

Live and grow . . . Our four-year study of religion must be complemented by an active participation in our faith. A frequent visit with God can give us a fuller realization and appreciation of the relationship between God and His creatures. As the church door closes behind us, the noises of the world are hushed, and we stand alone in the presence of the Almighty. Leaving the sanctuary of God, we feel Him living in our hearts, strengthening our endeavors and increasing our courage to face a pagan world.

teaches us the truths of God.

Pros and cons . . . Acting as chairman, Jane Vaccacio calls on Mary Martin to voice her opinion on realism in modern literature. Lorraine Wilantewicz, Caroline Johnston, Kathleen Mitchell, and Maureen Deevey focus their attention on Mary.

ENGLISH promotes

Bewitched, bothered and bewildered . . . Mary Wogan, Eileen Meade, Margaret Condon, Patricia Sheehan, Natalie Maddalina, Lorraine Richardelli and Sally Ann Swanick display mixed emotions as they listen to the eerie sounds of the dramatic recording of Edgar Allan Poe's "The Raven."

Best sellers on sale . . . Mary Jane McKenna and JoAnn Hecker enjoy browsing through the large selection of paperbacks. Our new book rack affords the students an opportunity to obtain excellent reading material at a price considerate of teenage pocket-books.

Realistic dream . . . Classroom drama comes alive as Mary Houlahan, Maureen Gavigan and Ann McCole relive the sleepwalking scene in Shakespeare's MACBETH. Dramatization of such classic plays gives a fuller understanding, a richer appreciation, and a greater enjoyment of great literature.

Four-hundredth birthday display . . . Carefully arranging books about Shakespeare's life and works, Rose Gambula and Linda Lopez complete the attractive exhibition which serves as a source of interest to the whole student body.

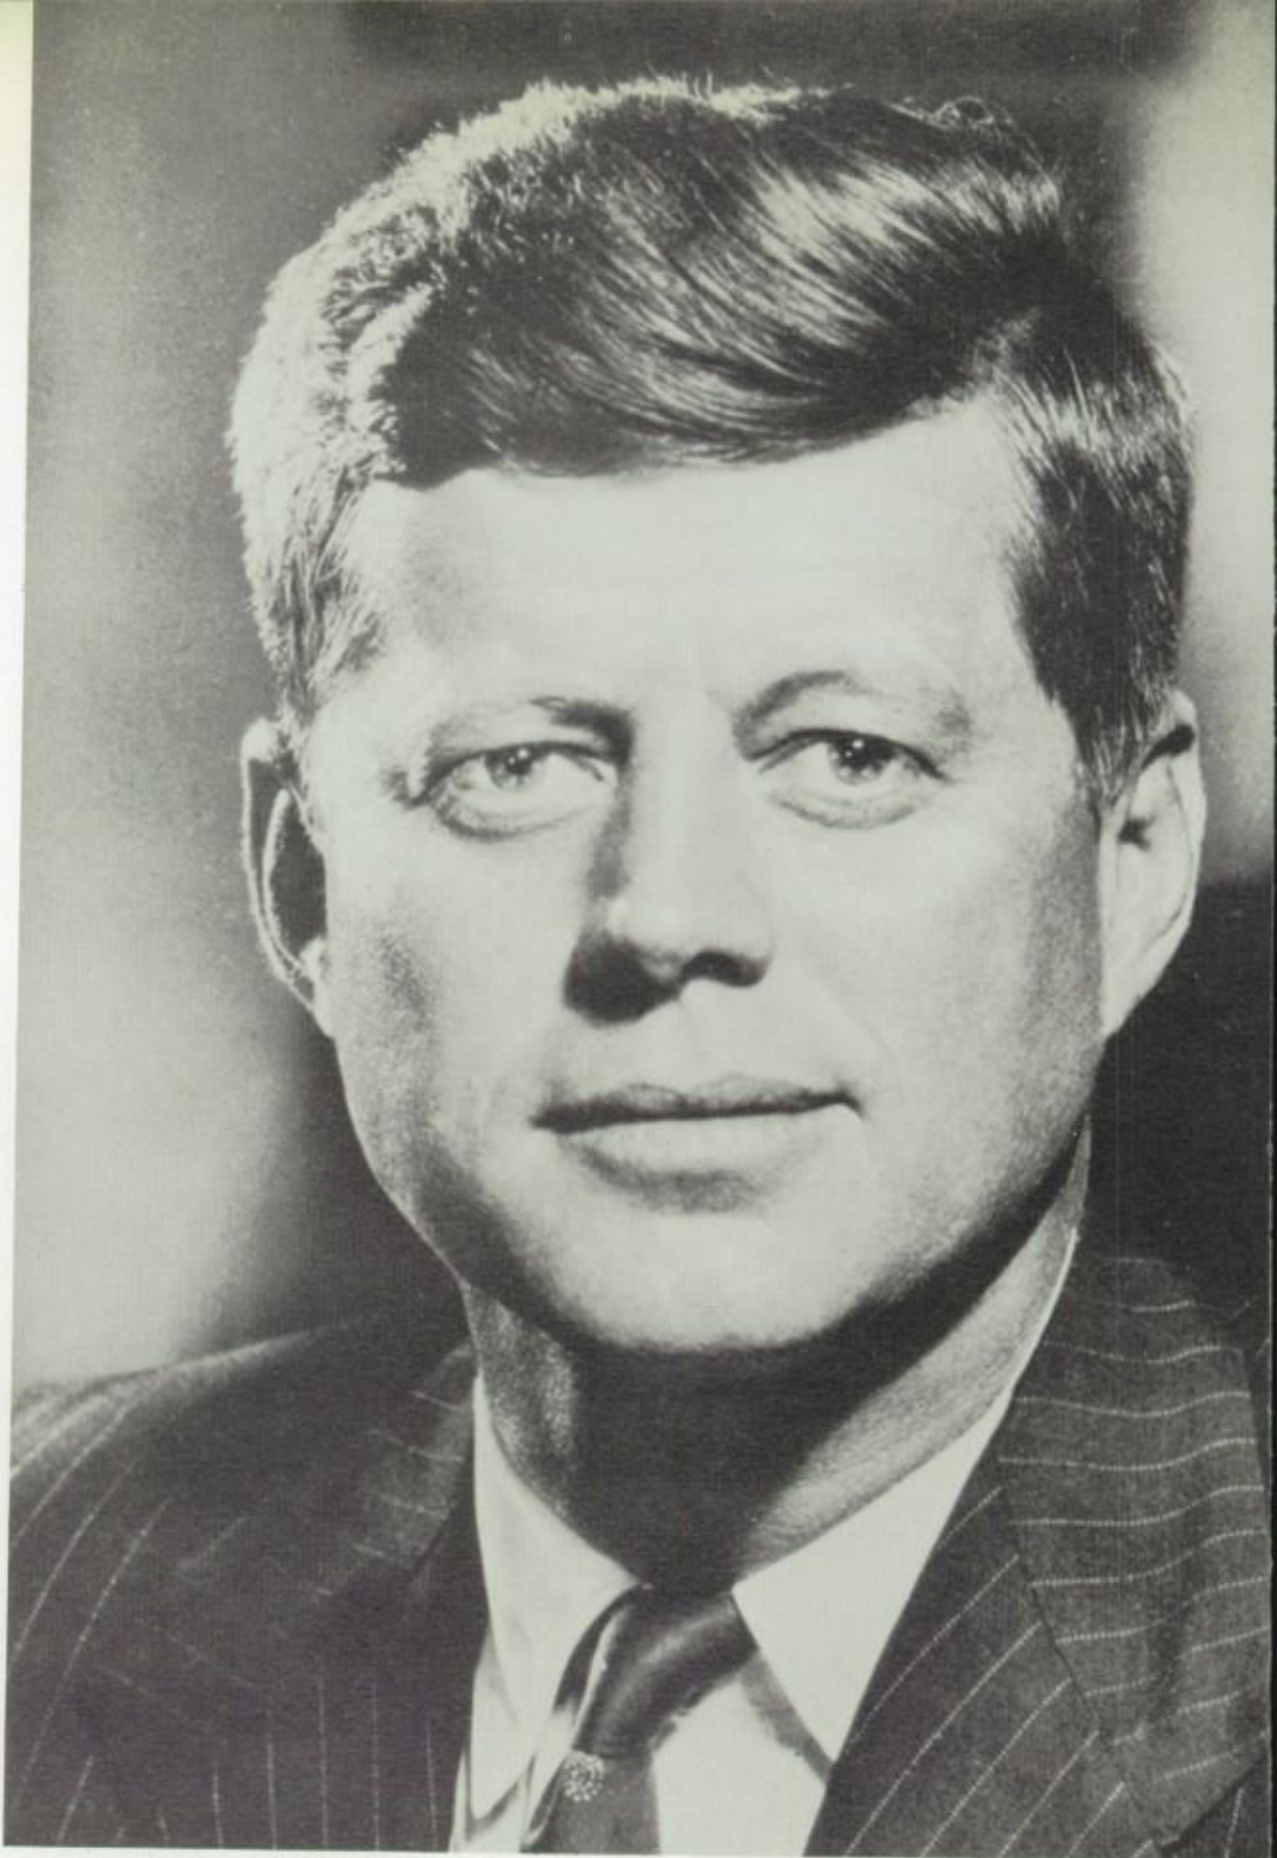

The word is the connecting link between a thought, product of the human mind and the expression outside that mind. For this reason, the precise study of words is a keystone of communication both oral and written. It is the aim of the English department to develop in each student, as far as possible, that ability which can make her an instrument of creative thought and virile action through the use of the language arts. The proper use of the right word at the right time forms a continuous flow of goodness and justice between man and man.

"Hail to the Chief" . . . For as long as the United States exists, John Fitzgerald Kennedy will be revered as a martyr for the cause of freedom in the never-ending war on hate, bigotry and the suppression of man's inalienable rights.

Salute to a fallen hero . . . With solemn faces reflecting the gravity of the occasion, an honor guard surrounds the picture of the late President Kennedy at our memorial assembly.

HISTORY
acquaints us
with world

The scope of Catholic education has widened considerably, but the basic concept that youth should be well informed about the world in which they live remains unchanged, thus making our comprehensive four-year study of history of the utmost importance.

As a foundation, economic geography enriches our knowledge of the ever-changing world and its people, while civics deepens our understanding of the functions of government. The second phase of study consists of world history, an over-all coverage of the progress of man from prehistoric times to the present. And, as the final step, a two-year course in American history is presented, instructing us in our American heritage.

The use of television, radio, movies and slides brings both past and present to life, making history more than just a subject, but a basic part of our lives.

Brought up in the glow of freedom, we leave school ready to defend what we love, for we have a working knowledge of the past and the benefit of the experiences of those who have lived in it.

Investigating the past . . . Elaine Coffey and Kathleen Lawler team up to examine some of the boundary changes in Europe following the Treaty of Versailles.

Presentation of colors . . . At a school assembly, Mary Devlin presents to Our Lady of Perpetual Help, the flag that Congressman Carey arranged to have flown over our Nation's Capitol.

News and views . . . Educational television programs enlighten and interest 104 American history students, as they enjoy history in the making, via video.

Acquiring a basic knowledge of Latin will give the student an untold wealth of knowledge from which she can draw not only now but in later life.

This official tongue of ancient Rome became elegant in the literature of Cicero and Julius Caesar. The student studying the English vocabulary knows that many of the prefixes, suffixes and roots of the language are derived from Latin.

When the great empire of Rome fell, Latin was incorporated into local tongues throughout the European continent. In the third century it flowered as the official language of the Catholic Church, and today is a fundamental requisite for those seeking medical, religious, legal, political, and certain business careers.

Intensive study of Latin's rich vocabulary, together with its declensions, idioms, and conjugations, provides the student with language skills easily adapted to courses in any of the modern romance languages as Spanish, French and Italian.

LATIN provides the basis . . .

Assuming the teacher's role . . . Mary Hilley, a freshman, struggles through the pronunciation of Latin expressions. She also attempts to explain the derivation of these Latin abbreviations frequently used in the English language.

Guiding hand . . . Sister Mary Augusta helps Linda Cacace through a difficult spot in the story of "Jason and the Argonauts." Underneath the confusion of ablative absolutes, pluperfect tenses and idioms lies an exciting story which Latin brings alive to second year students.

To err is human . . . Maureen Coughlin and Virginia Lawson look at Patricia Farrell as she turns to her classmates for help. Mistakes, such as spelling "miserint" for "miserunt" cannot be forgiven, but we benefit by our errors and Pat definitely will not make the same mistake twice.

Imaginary travels . . . Eileen Gibbons takes a tour of ancient Rome by way of an accurate road map. Comparing Roma antiqua with modern Rome, Eileen finds that while some aspects of the Eternal City have changed, a great part of it is the same today as it was in the days of Julius Caesar.

... for the understanding of SPANISH.

The influence of the Spanish people is clearly visible not only in the continual rise in world importance of Spanish cultural achievement but also in the direct exchange of customs, ideas and social activities.

The language of Spain is flexible, rich in beautiful expression and varied in idiomatic structure. Like its people it is a proud language loving color, music and beauty. Spanish is also a truly romantic tongue derived predominately from Latin.

With the help of modern textbooks and audio-visual aids we attempt to master Spanish vocabulary, idioms, pronunciation and sentence structure. Moreover, the working vocabulary and power of expression is increased because of the greater use of the Spanish language in our own environment.

Our affection for this language is deepened when our knowledge is enriched by the study of the people, the culture, and the literature of Spain and Latin America.

Fly east . . . That seems to be the invitation of Lynn Murray as she points out the interesting dress of the matador. Although most of us may never see Spain, we can enjoy its culture through a thoughtful study of the native tongue.

Sing together . . . With the added attraction of the sombreros, Catherine Vaselli, Lynn Murphy, Lorraine Miller, Linda Pizzirusso, Mary Jane Sharp, Linda Naradovy, Joan Seufferling and Adele Hummel harmonize to a familiar Spanish number, "¡Que será, será!"

¡Buenas tardes, señorita! . . . So begins the Spanish conversation between Rose Anna Ricci and Lucille Della Gatta attracting the attention of the entire class. Sister looks on, watching for errors in pronunciation, realizing that the constant repetition is so important in the mastery of language.

Found in locker? . . . Hardly, for the American costume will never equal the brilliance and color of Mexican attire. Proud to display her souvenirs of a wonderful experience, Lillian Ortega attracts the attention of Barbara Mackiewicz, Barbara Scotto, Anita Pedernales, Bernadette McLaughlin and Ana Maria Loureiro. The beauty of our neighboring country is evidenced in the warmth of its culture and in the intense richness of its costume.

Attention, everyone! . . . Snap on the tape recorder and listen to the voice of Frances Glespen as she recites a dialogue. Used as a teaching device, the recorder affords quick learning through repetition.

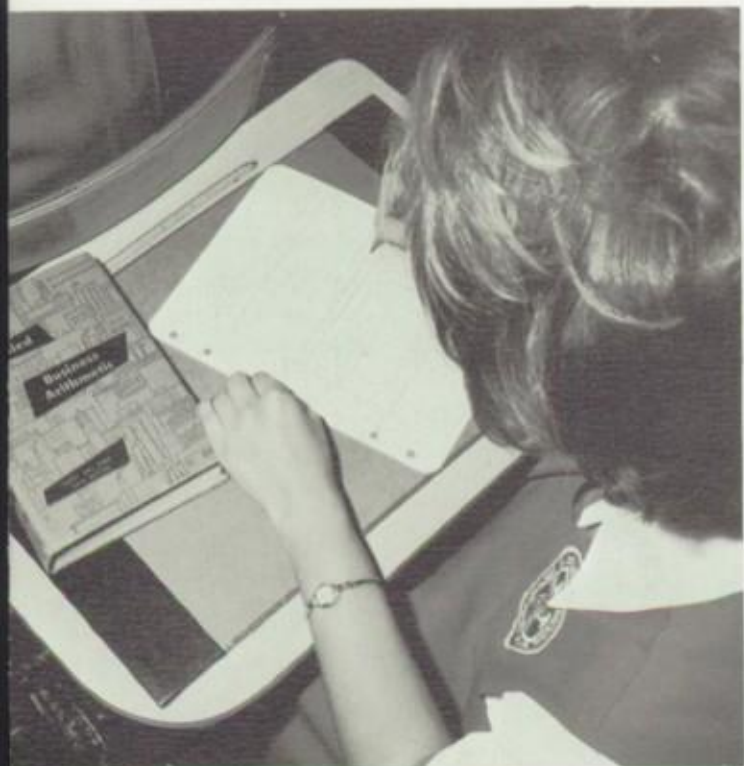

In search of a solution . . . Lillian Hodges and Catherine Jacobsen complete a difficult problem in tenth year math.

Decision by comparison . . . Elizabeth McCarthy shows Lucille Sulfaro the way to determine if the figure she has drawn on the graph is a parallelogram by using the method of finding the slopes of two opposite lines and comparing them for equality.

Thinking through theorems . . . Kathleen Gibbons explains the definite steps and reasons used to solve the geometric theorem to Isabel Hernandez and Carmen Igartua while Susanna Carlin watches attentively.

Imaginary customer . . . This freshman's sales ticket has no real recipient. By actually drawing the slip and writing the necessary information, however, she acquires a small but important degree of business know-how.

Exactness stressed . . . Checking the answers for their algebraic exercises, Diane Smolinski, Eileen White and Mary Asmar make certain no error has entered their figuring.

MATHEMATICS quickens perception.

Mathematics is the science that explores the world of quantities and magnitudes through the use of symbols. By developing the mind to strive for perfection in solving problems and balancing equations, it equips us with an appreciation for the supreme order in the universe and stimulates our search for truth.

The study of algebra prepares us for the more intricate tenth year mathematics which includes theory analysis and correct reasoning. Business arithmetic acquaints the freshmen with basic rules and methods of finance.

As a science of exactness, mathematics trains us to think and to work our problems, not only in its own world, but in our lives as well.

Onion observers . . . Janice Wolf meticulously peels an onion while Joan Cawley awaits the specimen for study under the microscope. Joan Janowski adjusts her instrument for the best focus and Raffaella Proscia prepares to take notes on their observations.

◀ No mistakes made here . . . Julie Ann Richardelli busily takes notes on the experiment for an electrolyte while Mary Martin cautiously prepares to use the necessary chemicals. Learning to take notes accurately and to follow directions carefully is a requirement for all chemistry students.

Precise preparations . . . As Pauline Turchiano carefully measures the hydrogen sulfide, Kathleen O'Hara proceeds to ignite the Bunsen burner that will produce the heat needed for the decomposition of the reactants.

Just a little more . . . Knowing that the right proportion of the reactants will better insure a successful experiment, Rosemary Jacobsen slowly adds a measure of water to the test tube, hoping she will then obtain the desired result.

In a student's world, biology, the study of the origin, structure, functions and life histories of vegetable and animal organisms, is one of the most interesting and fundamental of the subjects offered by the school.

Equal to it in importance is chemistry, from which the student learns the nature and composition of the different kinds of matter and the laws which govern their relationship.

Both subjects open the door to an understanding of living things. Although many unanswered questions remain, one who has studied them has taken a step in the direction of fulfillment.

the process of nature.

Success in the commercial world is almost totally dependent upon the training received in high school. For this reason, a comprehensive business course is carefully coordinated with academic studies.

As beginners, introduction to business trains us in office decorum and proper business procedures, while business arithmetic teaches the special variety of mathematics which is the basis of our economy. With these fundamentals at our disposal, we are able to advance to bookkeeping, an invaluable asset in business today. Because of their importance to the successful career girl, stenography and typewriting, later becoming transcription, form the central point in this area of study.

Finally, seniors are prepared for actual office work with a course in secretarial practice. Through the use of modern office equipment, the girls are made ready to take their place in the world with added poise and self assurance.

Dialing direct . . . Ann Marie Sharp demonstrates correct technique to Marina Glussi, who carefully observes her efficiency in managing the necessary details.

Tens, hundreds, thousands . . . Practical experience on the adding machine is included in the secretarial practice course taken by our seniors. Ann McCole, Regina Scott, Eileen Murray, Mary Doherty, Diane Koehler and Joanne Davis, by working on exercises in their booklets, become proficient in the touch method of addition, subtraction, and multiplication.

Student instructor . . . Karen O'Toole demonstrates the use of the check-writer and protector to Eileen Gallogly in the secretarial practice room. Completely absorbed in her work at a nearby comptometer is Ann McCole.

Perfect concentration . . . The tapping sounds of the keyboard penetrate the typing room as sophomores practice one of their first lessons. Patricia McGuire, Margaret Collins, Lorraine Schiro, Maureen Fitzsimmons, Rose Anna Ricci, Maureen Schools, Angela DiDomenico, Mary Hainey, JoAnn Hecker, Joanne Tamlyn, Kathleen Farrell, and Eileen Carlin fix their eyes attentively on their books and observe the rules of proper posture.

New skills and efficiency . . .

Fanciful visions . . . Philomena DiRe, Karen Fitzsimmons, Geraldine Muscat, Linda Capuano, Jane DeSantis, Helen McGuire, and Christine Sparano laughingly discuss the imaginary trips they will take for an "introduction to business" project. By looking through travel folders, they begin to visualize the interesting and fun-filled places they will visit.

Keep the presses rolling . . . Ann Kennedy and Catherine Schools demonstrate correct operation of the Gestetner, a type of mimeograph machine. Directions for operation are posted for the convenience of users and as a precaution against breakage.

Files, folders and grades . . . Karen Dahl and Joan Flynn place corrected secretarial practice assignments in the file cabinet used for this purpose. Class marks improve as the contents of each student's folder increases.

Tick on the line . . . Sophomores in 206 practice basic sten principles. They will find that if they learn the short forms and positions well now, they will have little trouble with transcription and secretarial practice.

Re-view of commercial texts . . . Catherine Schools reads while Mary Culver notes some of the many good business practices found in the freshmen General Business book. Referring to the secretarial practice book used in senior year, Julie Richardelli and Brenda Pinnel go over again basic rules essential to every secretary's success.

... come
training.

Lending an ear . . . 103 Seniors listen and type information recorded on the dictaphone, a business machine widely used in offices today. Skill, acquired through patient practice now, pays off in dollars later.

Muffin makers . . . Laura Calderone, Geraldine Muscat, Helen McGuire, Winifred Morse, Anna Napoli and Christine Sparano apply their newly acquired knowledge of baking. After greasing pans, slicing and dicing apples, and kneading dough, the mixture is prepared for the oven and, eventually, for that tasty treat.

Reluctant tasters . . . Freshmen Maureen Duhs, Linda Clendenny, Jane DeSantis, Geraldine Muscat, Julia Capraro, and Terry Sestito gingerly sample their muffin masterpieces. The fruits of their labor look inviting, but appearances can be deceiving and our prospective housewives are a little fearful of making the final test.

prepares us for domestic duties.

Fashion trends . . . Barbara O'Keefe and Joan Burns point out the few minor adjustments still needed on their sewing projects. When hems are straightened, seams pinked and buttons fixed securely, the dresses will be ready for modeling and the final approval.

Sewing plans . . . Margaret Condon dreams about the attractiveness of her dress-to-be. Although it's just the beginning, the work seems well worth the effort.

The main objective of the homemaking course is to impart to the student an awareness of the tremendous value of a good home life.

The homemaking room of our school is fully equipped with the latest household time-savers and appliances. Here, during the first half of the course, pupils delve into the mysteries of meal planning and preparation, table settings, the nutritional values of food, and the quality of popular household products.

The second part of the term is mostly concerned with the practical art of sewing, a knowledge which is always useful to the competent homemaker. An understanding of fabric and design enables the pupil to more easily master the technique of sewing, and also encourages her to add a touch of originality to her work.

Every household skill that is acquired, whether in the culinary art, the practical art of thorough cleaning, or the art of getting along with others, is a step toward the achievement of the course's great goal — to teach the student the value of a good home life, so that she may make use of this knowledge in the future.

Bit of glitter . . . During art class, seniors Virginia Earle, Arlene Duffy and Mary Houlahan skillfully apply strokes to ordinary drinking glasses, transforming them into decorative vases. Although this type of art work can be a bit messy at times, the girls enjoy it thoroughly.

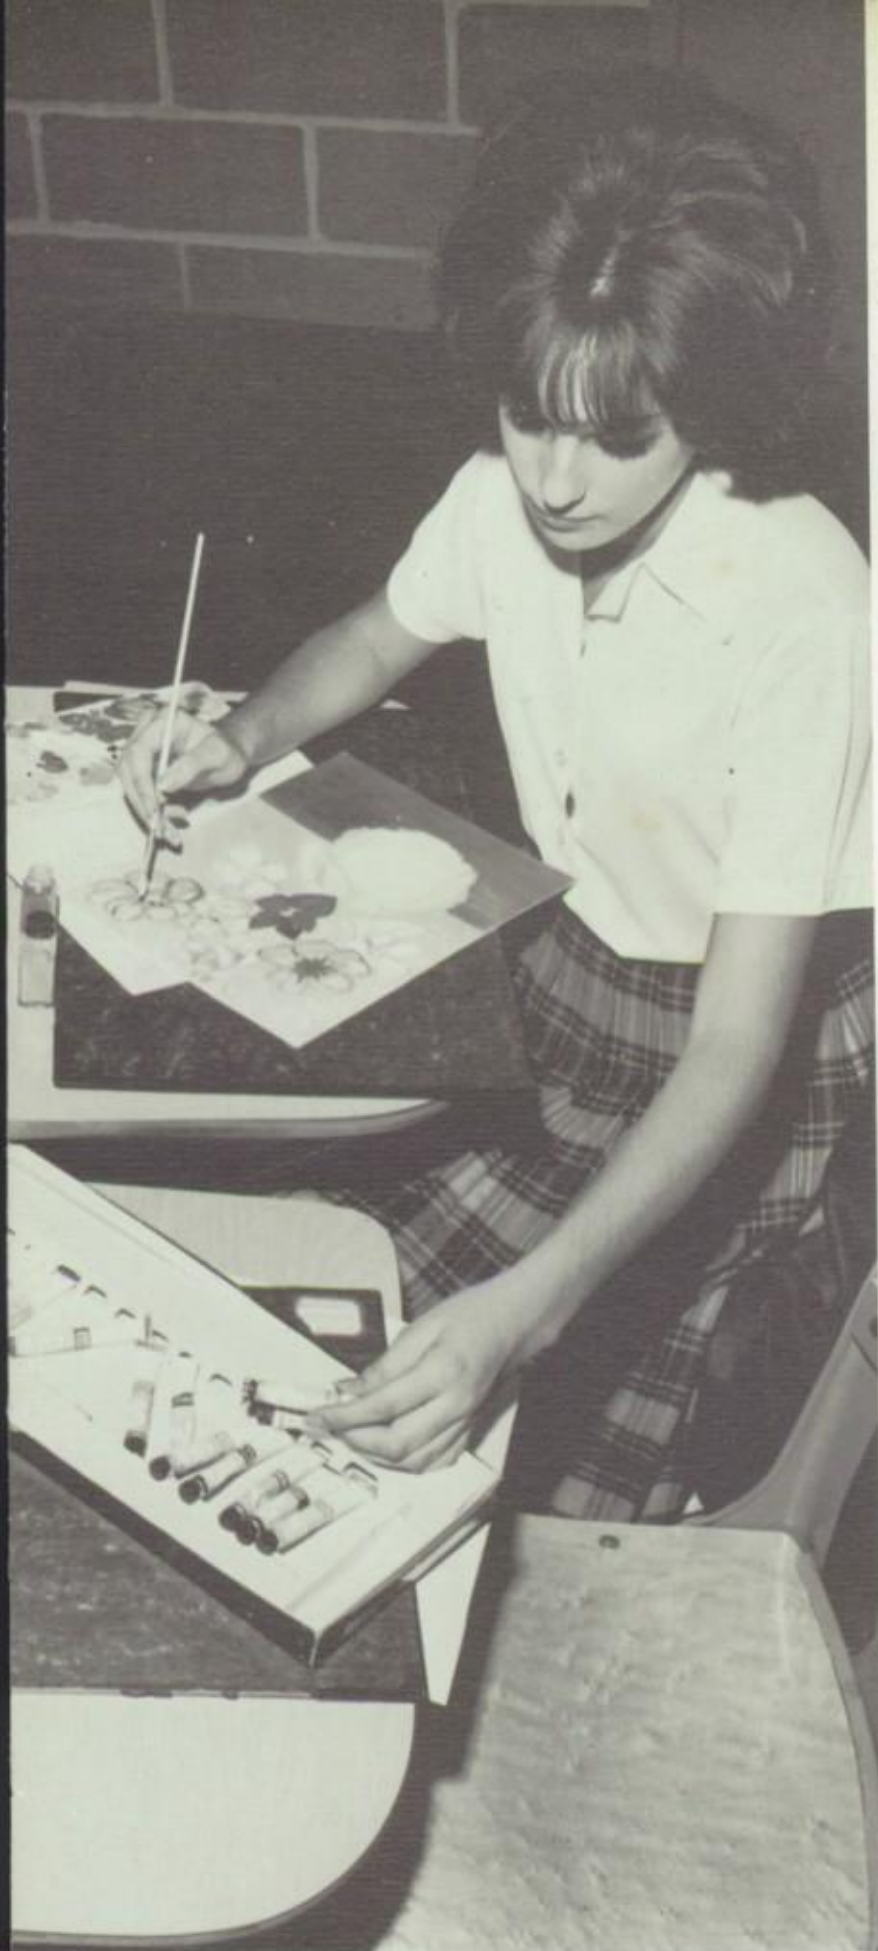

Through
appreciate beauty.

Through art, we may express and convey our ideas to others.

In the initial part of our art study, we become familiar with the materials used: pastels, watercolors, inks and chalks. Under the teacher's guidance, we learn the basic techniques needed to give form and proportion to beginners' sketches. With imagination and originality, we apply this knowledge to develop individual styles.

In another phase of the art program, students combine time and talent to exercise skills in fashion designing and sewing.

Study of art gives an appreciation of beauty, an introduction to the works of the masters and the reward of self-expression.

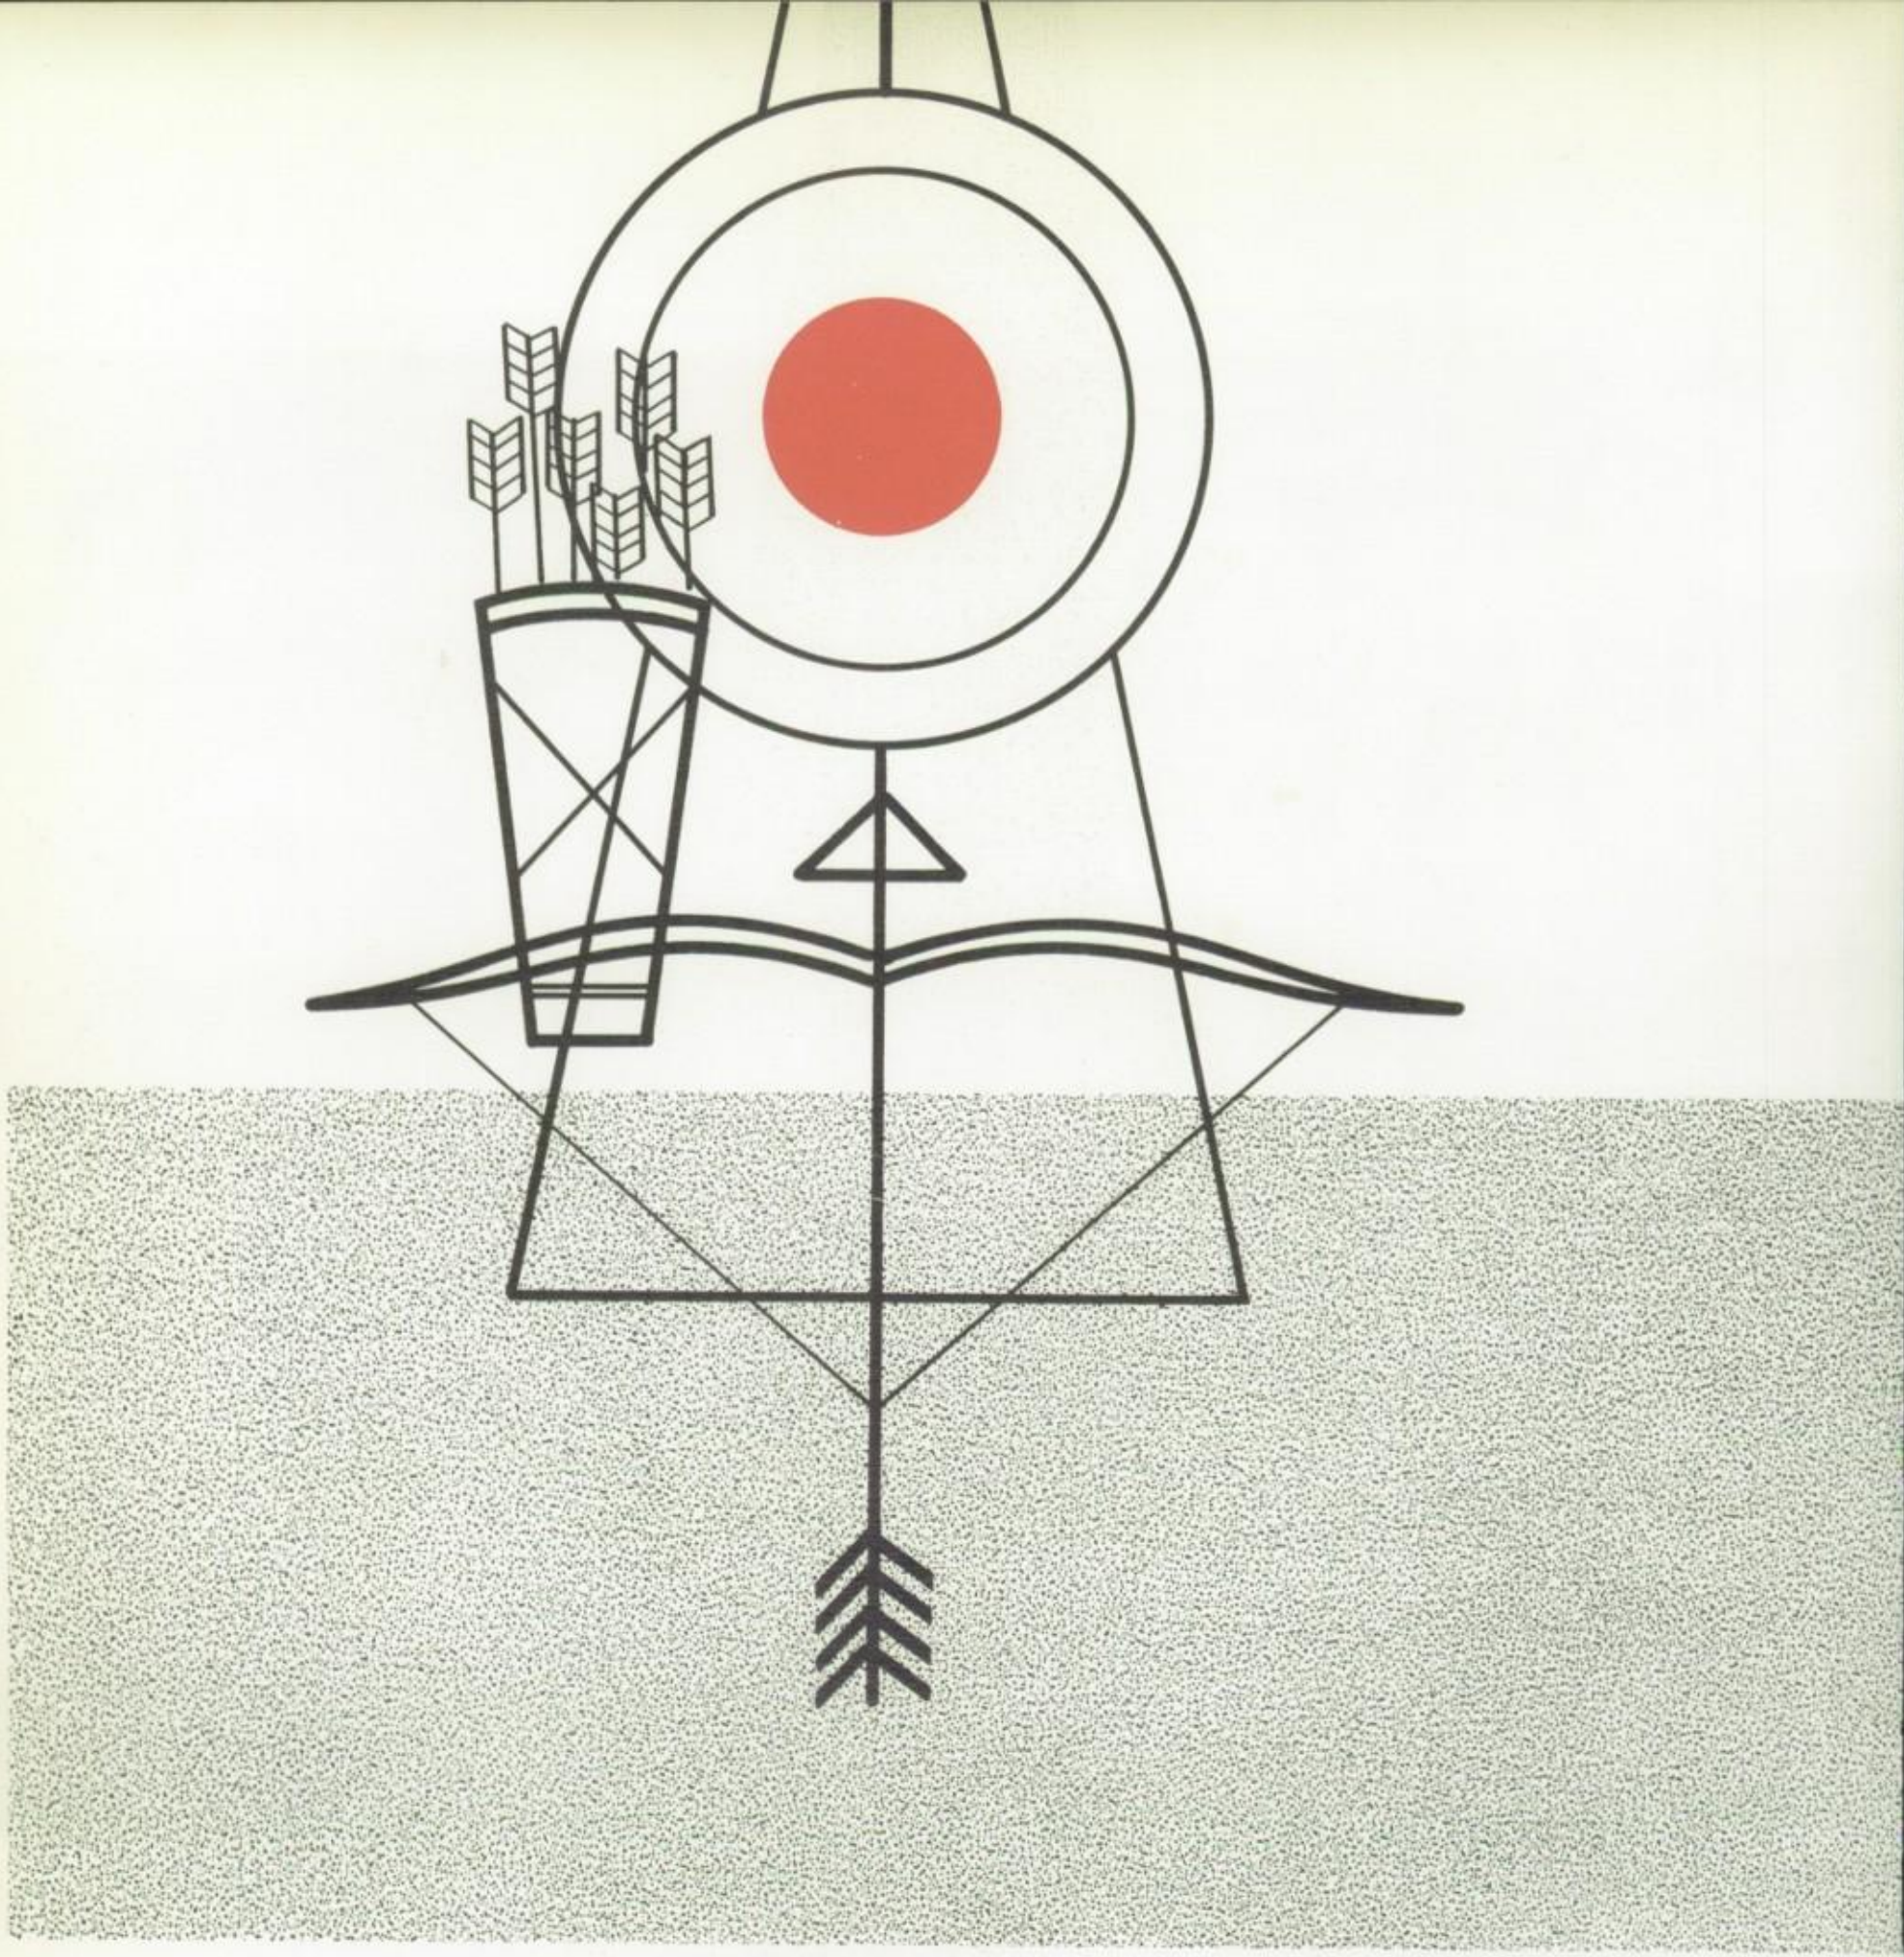

Final touch . . . Ann Kennedy tries to decide which color will be the right one to complete her still-life painting. Working in a quiet corner of the room, she is able to give her full attention to her work.

Attempting a perfect likeness . . . While Teresa Minickene poses, Annette Lucchesi tries to capture her image on paper. Annette demonstrates artistic ability in her sketch, which, when completed will be displayed in the classroom.

JUNIORS look forward to higher callings.

Prospective seniors . . . Assembling for a class picture, juniors finally reached the status of upperclassmen after two years of learning and developing. With every newly-acquired title, come serious responsibilities. Juniors are expected to set good example for the underclassmen and some are privileged to serve on Student Council. As this school year passes, another class will have met the rewarding challenge.

Juniors check on seniors . . . Junior members of the Ikon staff, Madeleine Shaughnessy, Kathleen Gibbons, Susanna Carlin and Patricia Kronkowski check lists of names and addresses in preparation for the final typewritten copy of the senior directory.

Their very own . . . Margaret Ruggiero, Dorothy Rutuelo, and Barbara O'Keefe admire each other's new self-made dresses. The girls agree that the "do-it-yourself" method of wardrobe building is more rewarding than a shopping spree.

Laugh break . . . In a change of pace from their English class, 302 Juniors enjoy a comical anecdote related by a fellow student. This type of self-expression is not only refreshing but usually makes for a more enjoyable period for teacher and student.

*Well-informed women of tomorrow . . . Evelyn McQuillan, Margaret McNamara, Joyce Hagerty, Patricia Burns, and Kathleen McLaughlin keep informed of today's changing world as they read through current issues of the National Geographic magazine. Such valuable, supplementary literature gives interest and animation to the facts already covered in class.*

Wardrobe stylists . . . Margaret Ruggiero and Carol Beck watch Sally Ann Swannick as she demonstrates the fundamentals of dress designing, while Lorraine Richardelli approves the dress Dorothy Rutuel chooses to make. This informal period gives them the opportunity to express fashionable imagination and to form a worthwhile hobby.

In tribute . . . Catherine O'Neill and Nora Ashe carefully arrange the lettering on their bulletin board display which serves as an inspirational reminder of the late President Kennedy and his family.

Hostesses in a huddle . . . Juniors, Nora Ashe, Janet Mitchell, Kathleen Alford, Nora Spinelli, Dorothy Quinlan, Louise Pangia, Theresa Oneta, Joan Tobin, and Patricia Sweeney discuss their respective duties as hostesses for the Senior Dance. Their willingness to help will truly make the dance an affair to remember.

Mutual admiration . . . Dorothy Quinlan, Elizabeth McCarthy, Laura Antoniolli, and Susanna Carlin express satisfaction with their long-awaited, new uniforms. Navy blue blazers and blue and gray plaid skirts may not be top fashion, but to juniors they symbolize a certain prestige and maturity.

Discovery '64 . . . During a free moment, Catherine McNicholas takes time to find the setting to the day's lesson on the globe as classmate, Mary Ellen Morris, helps her exploration. The geographical location of a particular state or country and its surrounding areas are always important factors in its history, and for proper study, should be known.

That winning number . . . Christine Kennedy excitedly displays her unexpected prize to Lorraine Rice, Gina Prusich, and Frances Mangner who secretly hope that her good luck will extend to them.

Homeward bound . . . With the ringing of the dismissal bell, smiling juniors descend the stairs and head for home, where homework, television, and relaxation will eventually end their long day.

Hearty boost . . . Junior cheerleaders, Evelyn McQuillan, Mary Anne McCormack, Ellen McCarthy, Michele Mahoney, Elizabeth McCarthy, Peggy Sullivan, and Kathleen Alford watch approvingly as Maureen Ricciardi and Jane Lowney energetically practice a welcoming cheer in anticipation of the afternoon's game. A zestful salute always encourages the competing teams to play with enthusiasm and vigor.

Roving reporter . . . Carmen Igartua, reporter for the Co-Redemptrix, conducts a survey on freshman activities, as Eileen Gibbons willingly contributes her opinion. This aspect of reporting, which involves the direct interviewing of students, makes an interesting and candid column for both readers and participants.

Models of fashion . . . Simplicity representative, Geraldine Robins, shows student models, Carolyn Coffey, Catherine O'Neill and Linda Cumby lovely spring fashions that can be made so easily and so inexpensively.

Casual look . . . Joan Hotaling, Ellen Gill, Carol DePresco, Rosemary Scotto-Lavino, and Theresa Oneta exhibit the new look for the well-dressed teen. Their graceful modeling not only makes a successful mission project, but also encourages student home-sewing interests.

Touch of Spring . . . Jeanne Ronan fastens Mary Ellen Cross' formal gown as Kathleen Alford admires this youthful creation of blue pastels. After such last-minute preparations, the girls will present these styles to the enjoyment of the audience.

Weather girls . . . Mary Hussey, Elizabeth Pittaluga, Wanda Kwolek, Valeria Fennell, Susan Moubay, Jean Barca and Maureen Higgins are seven avid weather watchers. As the first snow of the season falls, the girls see visions of snowballs, sleigh riding, and maybe an unscheduled holiday.

SOPHOMORES grow with new learning.

Relaxing interval . . . Eileen Dunlap, Linda Splendorio and Valeria Fennell take full advantage of their lunch period, as they relax after the morning's studies and refresh themselves for the afternoon periods ahead.

Beginners in business . . . Sophomores begin to realize that typing is not so simple as they thought. Their struggle to keep their eyes on the copy and not on the keys will reward them with better typing skills in the future.

Winning streak . . . Hopeful of winning a big prize, Kathleen Shea, Loretta McDevitt, Susan Moubray, Ellen Hemm and Geraldine Conroy enter into the excitement of the annual parish bazaar.

Joy of giving . . . In keeping with the Christmas spirit, Eileen Clark, Susan McDevitt, Kathleen Erickson and Linda Ippolito happily compare the gifts received from their Kris Kringles.

Additional editions . . . Mary McLaughlin fills the demand for paperbacks as she distributes copies of Silas Marner to Kathleen Granville and Kathleen Shea, who will promptly deliver them to their classmates.

Belles of the ball . . . With the first night of the Spring Festival ended, Rose Anna Ricci and Patricia Meyrahn express their delight in being a part of the successful variety show.

Adding to the future . . . Helen Liston and Cherryl Rice ponder a difficult question as they learn the fundamentals of business arithmetic. These principles will help give them a working knowledge of ordinary business transactions.

Winter news . . . Linda Cumby and Janet Cutaneo put the finishing touches on a bulletin board in their official room. The board is a pleasant factor in classroom atmosphere and contains many ideas for fashionable winter attire.

Ominous reminder . . . Marisa Bacchia hands Patricia Hewitt, Loretta McDevitt, Gaetana Foligno and Mary Corkery the chairs used by the proctors during the examinations. Distribution of these chairs sadly reminds them of the approaching exams and of the toilsome studying ahead.

To tell the truth . . . Rosemary Pangia, Virginia Lawson, Agnes Hedlund and Patricia Callahan compare report cards while chatting between classes. Their expressions reveal that the marks received were to their complete satisfaction.

Surprise package . . . Faces beam with delight as Maureen Higgins receives unexpected birthday greetings from classmates Mary Hussy, Elizabeth Pittaluga and Geraldine Sheerer. Although not a fancy restaurant, the cafeteria provides pleasant surroundings for birthday celebrations.

Number, please . . . Kathleen Erickson holds the directory as Ana Maria Loureiro checks to see if she has the right number. Kathy playfully chides Ana for forgetting both her lunch and her phone number.

◀ Beatlemania strikes . . . During the five minutes between periods, Beth Horan, Lucille Della Gatta, Margaret Conlin, Patricia McGuire and Patricia Dolan give their impersonation of the popular English singing group, the Beatles.

Lady luck . . . Barbara Scotto, Jeraldine Mitchell, and Patricia Farrell stop for a moment to tell about their winnings at the school bazaar and to wish Barbara Stein and Maureen McGuire the best of luck.

Radiant receiver . . . Ellen Lapinski affectionately kisses her sister Carol, who has just received the symbol of a student's achievement, her high school ring.

Pinch of this—dash of? . . . Loretta Nugent, Dorothy O'Leary, Patricia La Gravenese, Joan Donnelly and Karen Fitzsimmons know that only precise measuring can produce tasty muffins. These future homemakers readily admit that mixing ingredients haphazardly will surely result in disaster.

Show of our world . . . Freshmen, Denise Lamberti, Kathleen Flynn and Marie DeSantis show Nancy Falotico and Linda Naradovy their contributions to the geographical exhibit. This display proves to be both interesting and informative to any viewer.

At ease . . . Mindy Fox, Judith Hom, Rosella Morris, Bernadette Siebecker, and Linda Luzzi catch the breath of fresh air they longed for during the period. The girls enjoy their five minute break before continuing with their busy schedule.

Microbe hunters . . . Bernadette Siebecker intently examines a microbe as Evelyn Alfors and Anne Atchue await their turn. Minute organisms brought into full view under the microscope enable the girls to actually see the things they are studying. The biological world, not fully known to them before, now takes on a new importance.

Congratulations from all . . . Valerie Vischio writes her good wishes on her classmate's flower box. Raffaella Proscia and Maryann Ocera, who will sign it next, mentally compose their greetings.

Gazing at genes . . . Barbara Murray points out to Christine Montemarano the microscopic construction of the genetic chain, which determines the characteristics of flies. Heredity is only a fragment of the biology studied by freshmen.

Riding the rings . . . Mrs. Schwende assists Barbara Munnelly in an exercise on the rings. With the securities of spotters, safety belts and mats, gym students try for a perfect performance.

Nimble fingers for the needy . . . Linda Capuano, Ellen McGlinchey, Mary Caffrey, Philomena Di Re and Teresita Sestito industriously sew dresses for the dolls which will be given at Christmas through the Red Cross to underprivileged children. This is just one of the several activities for the needy sponsored by our school.

On spare time . . . Arlene Lenhert, Catherine Coari, Carol Dugan and Sandra Mottola take a break, hoping for a higher bowling score in their second game.

Step right up . . . Patricia Glespen, Geraldine Volpe, Florence Palumbo, Catherine Vaselli and Patricia Marsling gather at the candy counter to buy "packaged carbohydrates" to sweeten their lunches and to give them energy for the rest of the afternoon.

Teen bandstand . . . Diane Garcia, Cynthia Fattori, Marie Croce, Joan Costa, Mary Hilley and Evelyn Guarco combine their talents and enthusiasm to produce pleasing melodies. The girls must practice perseverance and patience in order to obtain the harmony and rhythm of good music.

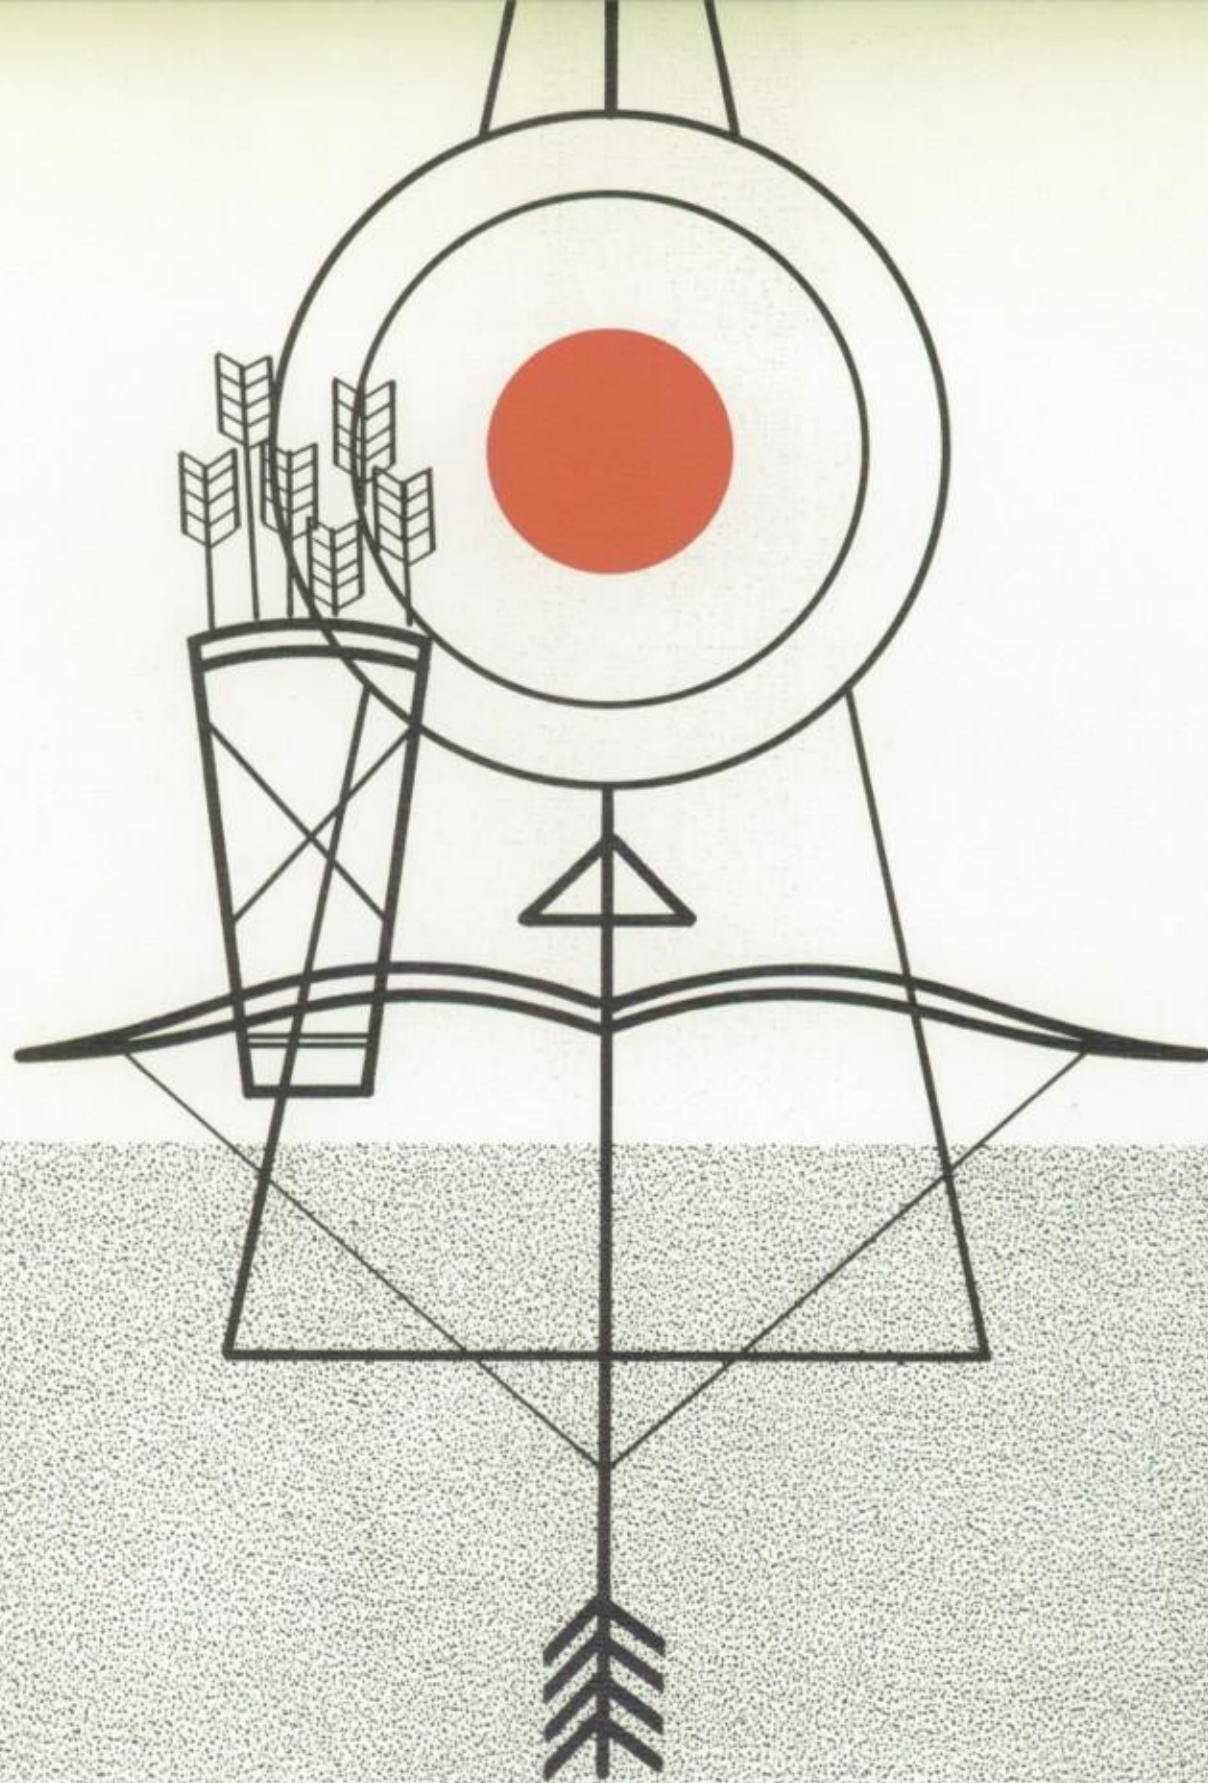

Apparatus adjustment . . . Biology students Anna Napoli and Eileen Riordan attempt to set up a microscope while Pat La Gravenese busily studies the construction of the instrument. Information acquired through analysis of the diagram will enable Anna and Eileen to put the apparatus together effectively. This powerful microscope, when in proper focus, assists students to readily comprehend the mysteries of biology.

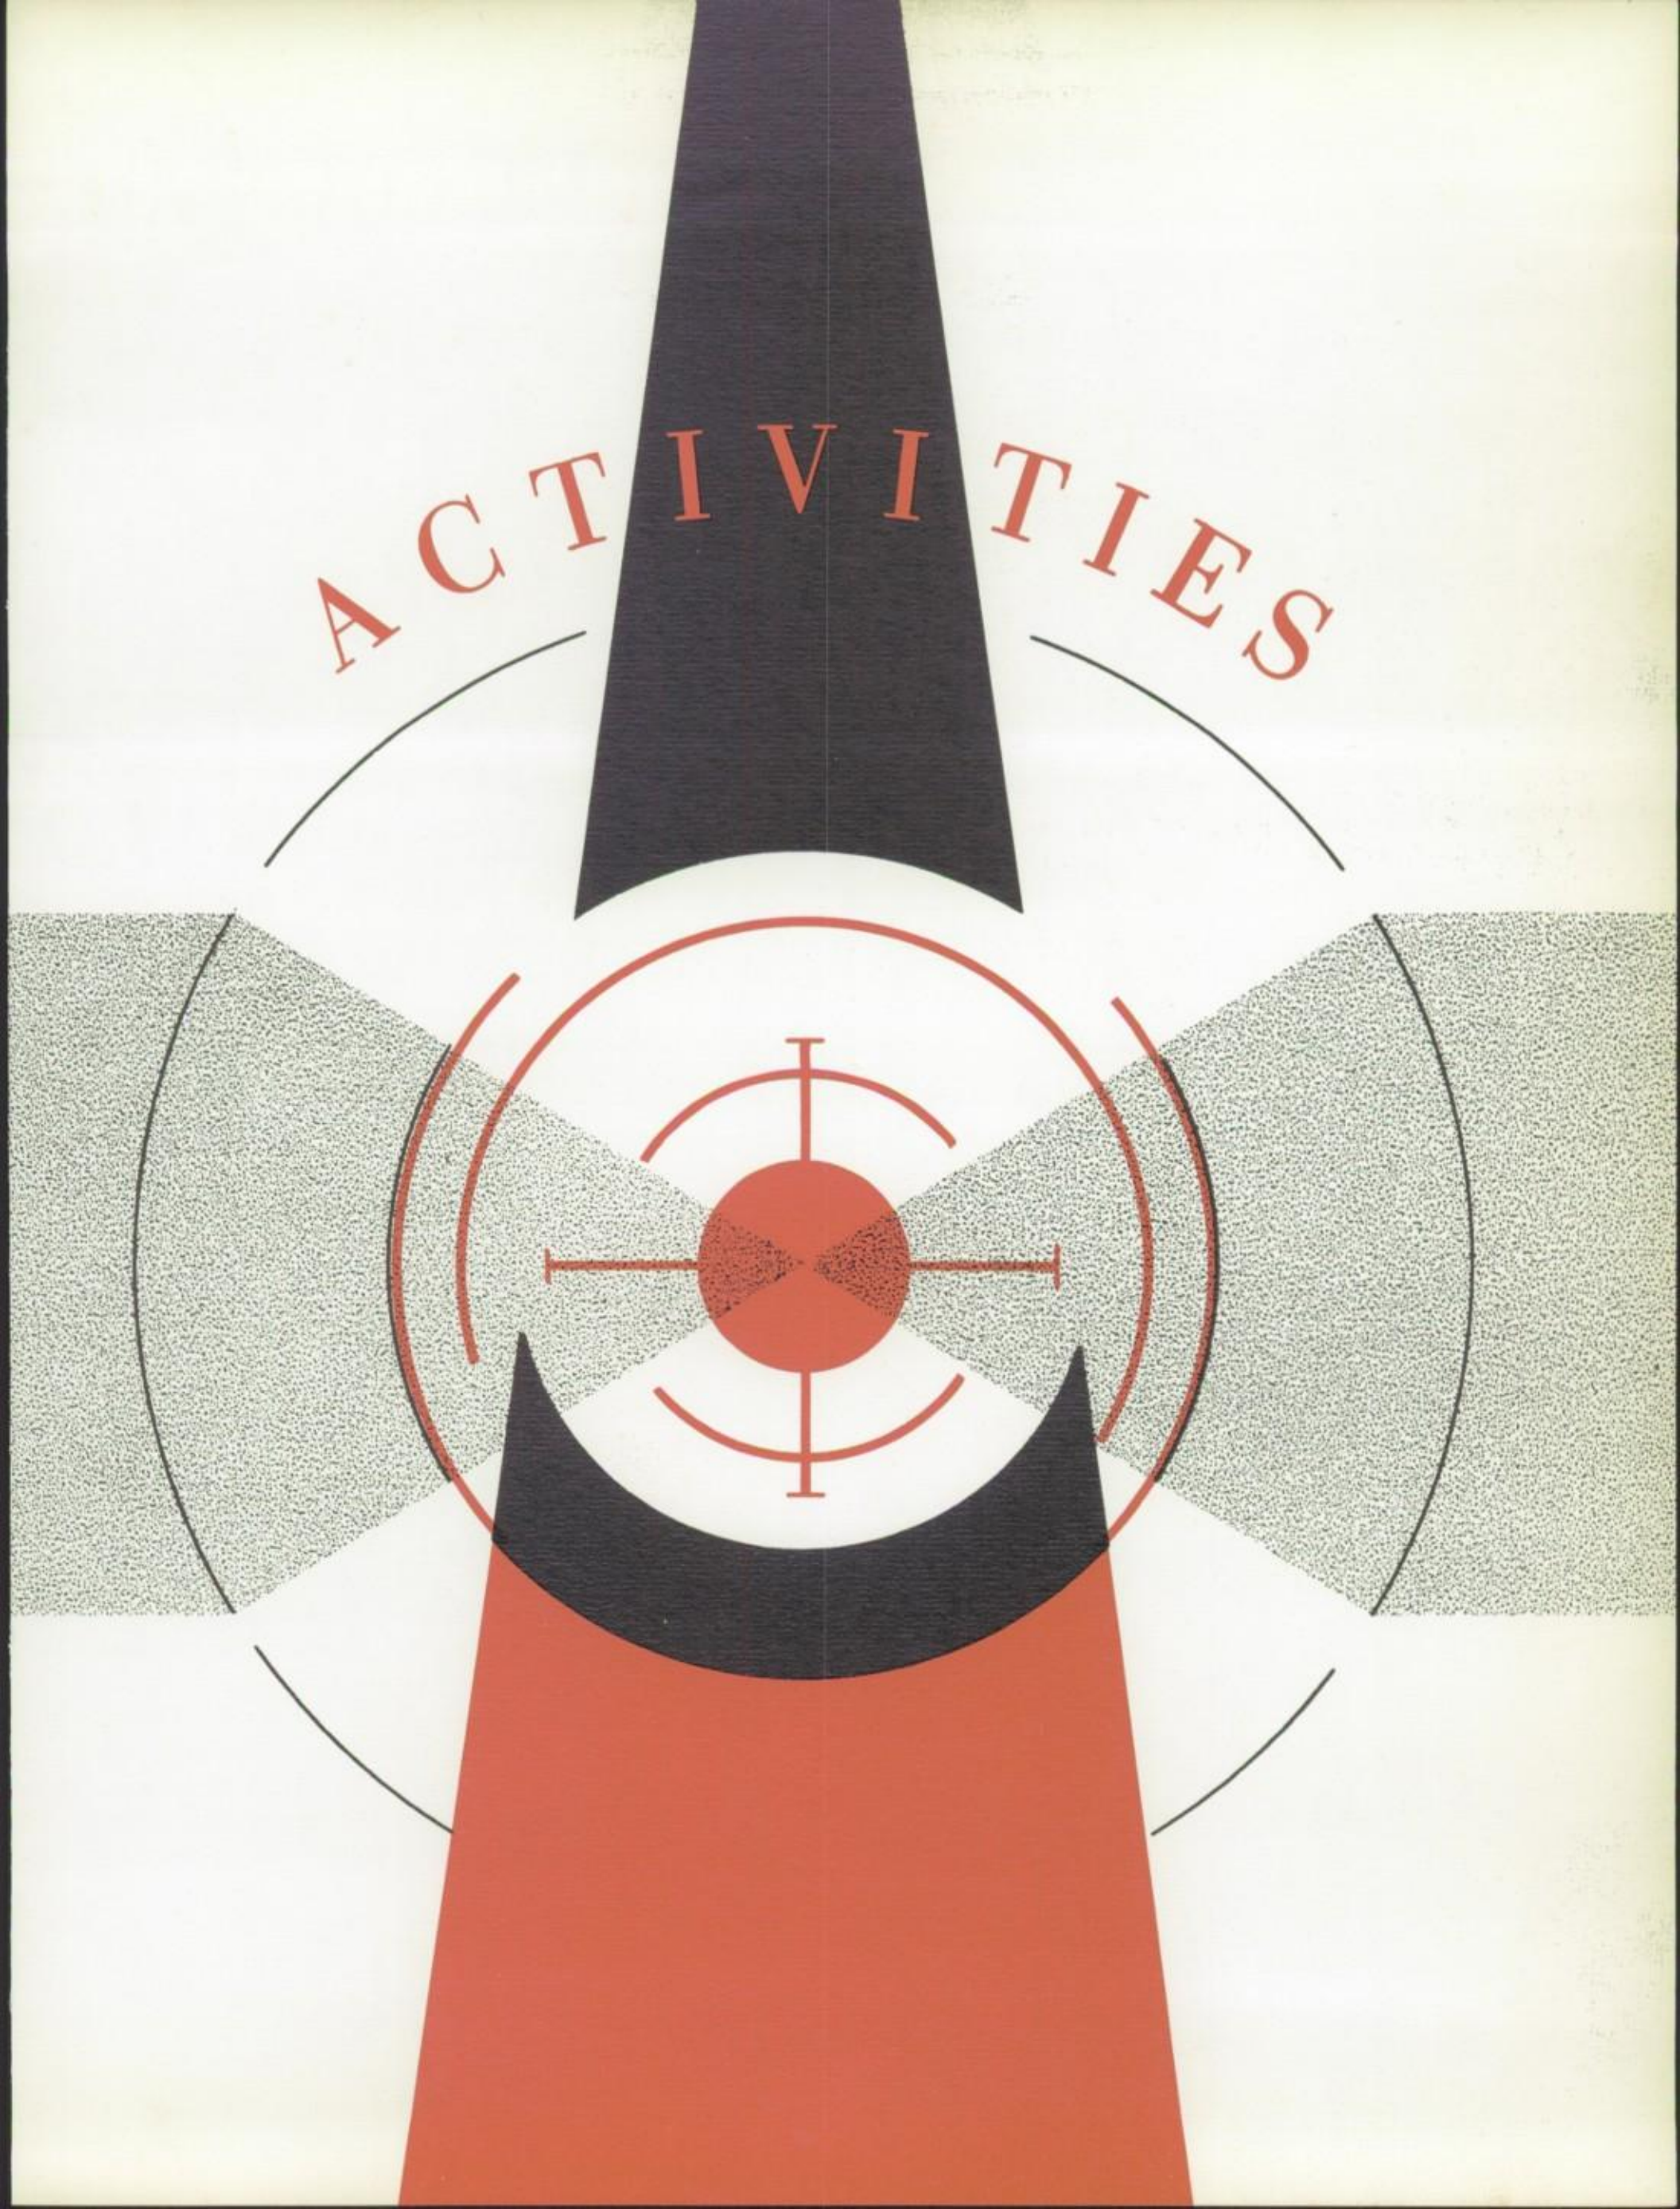

Birthday greetings . . . Madonna Murray carefully pins on Valerie Bourke's birthday corsage. Flowers distinguish each girl on her special day, bringing words of good wishes from both faculty and students.

In promoting cooperation with others, ACTIVITIES provide the first target in which we test our resources.

ACTIVITIES

STUDENT COUNCIL

Student Council . . . Janet Mitchell, Joyce Larsen, Anne Frewen, Catherine Saunders, Nora Spinelli, Regina Walsh, Louise Garafalo, Barbara Cooney, Kathleen Cooney, Anita Buono, Nora Ashe, Mary Houlahan, Susanna Carlin, Dorothy Klimas, Janet Drivick, Patricia Hubert, Catherine Jacobsen, Kathleen Gibbons, Mary Liston, Kathleen Babstock, Mary Jo Maher, JoAnne Sparano, Catherine McNicolas, Barbara Couillard, Marisa Bacchia, Pauline Turchiano, Jeanne Caruana, Rosemary Trotta, Veneranda Abbruzzese, Nancy Taylor, Concetta Melina, Mary Erckert, Carol Ann DePresco, Margaret Keaveny, Rosaleen Gallogly, Maureen Gavigan, Virginia Van Jones, Linda Siegmann, Noreen Creegan, Maureen Campbell, Kathleen Dugan, Lucille Sulfaro, Janet Molloy, Noreen Greany, Eileen McParland, Lynn Nelson, Marilyn Tell, Patricia Winters, Linda Savini, Mary Doherty, Joyce Hagerty, Rosanne Finelli, Mary Ellen Cross, Diane Johnson, Mary Lynch, Mary Ellen Jennrich, Diane Baranello, Mary Ann Mendelevski, Linda Baraca, Carol Lapinski, Mary Jane McKenna, Eileen Mallin, Anne Bruce, Mary Pine, Joan McGrath, Patricia Carten, Regina Guiry.

Each year the Student Council strives to maintain good order in the school by following a set of rules drawn up before the school year begins. These rules and regulations are announced to the student body at the first assembly of the year and, from that time on, are put into full practice. The result appears in the form of a well-organized school. However, only with the cooperation of each individual can the Student Council hope to achieve its goal of perfect order. Besides guiding traffic throughout the school, in halls and in the cafeteria, councilors are urged to make suggestions which will promote even better discipline in the school. By creating an atmosphere of responsibility and perseverance, they can instill in the student a genuine love for her surroundings and promote a willing obedience to school regulations.

A message . . . Student Council president, Joan McGrath, introduces councilors to the student body at our first assembly. Members will then proceed to state and explain the rules and regulations of the school.

LEO HONOR SOCIETY

The main objectives of the Leo Honor Society are to further Catholic ideals and to encourage good scholarship and leadership. It is composed of a select group of deserving Catholic high school students in the Brooklyn Diocese.

Prospective members are evaluated on the basis of intelligence, participation in school and civic activities and moral character. In addition, the candidate must receive a personal letter of recommendation from her pastor. As a symbol of their membership, students fulfilling these requirements are presented with a gold pin at the annual induction ceremony.

The spirit of dedication, a chief characteristic among members, guides them toward the higher goals set for them.

Catholic Leaders . . . Senior and junior members of the Leo Honor Society are: Linda Lopez, Patricia Kronkowski, Madeleine Shaughnessy, Lorraine Wilantewicz, Josephine Scoblete, Pauline Turchiano, Susanna Carlin, Janet Mitchell, Frances Glespen, Marisa Bacchia, Carmen Igartua, Catherine Jacobsen, Michaela Smith, Lynn Murray, Mary Ellen Jennrich, Lucille Sulfaro, Rosemary Jacobsen, Barbara D'Amico, Lynn Nelson, Mary Ann Mendelowski, Frances Grote, and Caroline Johnston.

Prompted by the lessons in Faith learned both at home and in school, we readily extend charity to our needy brethren. Cartons of clothing, toys, and school supplies are collected during Advent in the realization that these people must be fed and clothed first before they can be taught the Word of God. The sale of Christmas cards, Lenten mite boxes, contributions to the Society for the Propagation of the Faith, and classroom campaigns are directed toward aiding missionary work.

The Young Christian Students Organization, through discussion of family and school problems, helps students to become more Christlike by encouraging better understanding of one's neighbor.

During Holy Week, a school retreat presents each one with the opportunity to examine her conscience and become spiritually strengthened.

Religious activities, through prayer, sacrifice, and personal scrutiny, foster appreciation for all that God has given us and lead us to help lessen the wants of our neighbors.

Offering our share for the world's needs

Catholics for Latin America . . . Following Miss Patricia Cottingham's talk on the spiritual and temporal needs of our Latin American neighbors, Joan McGrath and Ann Marie Sharp seek further information about this worthwhile organization. Miss Cottingham is one of a group of lay apostles answering the Pope's plea to aid our needy brethren.

Cards for greeting and helping . . . Catherine Coari and Anne Atchue examine their boxes of Christmas cards as Barbara Donohue reads the message inside. Our mission minded students earnestly strive to sell many boxes of these religious cards because they know that the proceeds will help to support the missions.

Shipment of joy . . . As Linda Collins and Nora Spinelli carefully pack toys and Christmas cards, Joanne Davis gets ready to wrap and bind them for shipping. These toys, donated by the students, will brighten the Christmas season for many unfortunate children in our foreign missions.

Catholics in action . . . Secretary Elizabeth McVitie reports on the progress made by the Young Christian Students at a recent convention. Present at the meeting are Theresa Evans, Barbara Higgins, President Susan Granville, Catherine Murray, Ilda Palumbo, Jane Vaccacio and Catherine Jacobsen.

Venite adoremus . . . Patricia Knowles, Georgene Sheehan, Pauline Turchiano, Mary Martin, Jane Vaccacio, and Ann Marie Sharp portray the Nativity scene. Each year this pageant is presented to remind all of the true meaning of Christmas. Multicolored costumes add beauty to the setting, while the seniors' reverent performance offers devotion and inspiration to the student body.

Spreading the meaning of Christmas

Every window pane is etched in frost, the echo of bells and carols seems to reach the city streets and no one would be the least surprised to meet any number of Santa Clauses on a cold wintry day. It is not surprising, either, that this Yuletide spirit should penetrate the walls of Our Lady of Perpetual Help. During the few weeks preceding Christmas, a wonderful change takes place in the girls and also in the halls of our school, which are now redecorated in holly and tinsel. Our schedule becomes filled with holiday events which include a senior portrayal of the first Christmas, and is climaxed by Midnight Mass sung by our Glee Club. Indeed, we have some beautiful and happy memories to take with us on our long anticipated Christmas Holiday.

Season's spirit . . . Mary Ann McCormack and Mary Ellen Jennrich happily finish decorating the tree in their official room, 301. Christmas trees, which add much to the joy of the season, are seen in many of the classrooms.

Re-echoing the word . . . After the Christmas Assembly Mary Ann Piller, Elizabeth McVitie, Catherine Connor, Nancy Taylor and Frances Glespen are filled with the season's joy after their narration of the events leading up to the birth of Christ.

Christmas preparations . . . Teresa Minickene and Mary Jane McKenna display a representation of the Nativity as they arrange the figures in their proper positions. Filled with the Christmas spirit, the girls enjoy performing this task.

Thanks to Santa . . . Freshmen of 401 join in the spirit of the Christmas holidays as presents are exchanged among them. All bid farewell to Santa and express their joy at the gifts he has given them.

Broadening our horizons

Pleasant change . . . As Sister Margaret Helena conducts a library science class in our spacious library, 401 freshmen find the change of surroundings conducive to learning. This course provides the basic information that students will find helpful in future visits to the library.

Searching ended . . . Teresa Minickene gladly shows Margaret Johnston the catalogue card of the particular book they both wanted to read and hoped to find in the library.

File pages . . . Isabel Hernandez, Louise Pangia, and Dorothy Quinlan prepare newspaper and magazine articles to be placed in the vertical file by Diane Scaparo. This file serves as an excellent source of reference for researchers.

Check out center . . . Library pages Mary McLoughlin and Noreen Greany stamp books for freshmen, Barbara Longo and Jean Motel. For the newcomers, who are not yet familiar with the rules of the library, this friendly assistance is appreciated and goes a long way in encouraging good reading habits.

Readers' wonderland . . . As Patricia Glespen completes an assignment, Arlene Duffy takes time out for her supplementary reading. Library pages, Carol Wertepny, Virginia Earle, and Mary Ann Marano attend to their duties as they arrange returned books on the shelves. Whether it be for leisure reading or a special assignment, variety is the keynote in our library.

Reading has long been man's intellectual enjoyment. Today's vast reading public is the largest in history, and we, as students, are constantly reminded of the importance of being "well read."

By learning to use library facilities, students realize the advantage of having a well-stocked library at their disposal. Its fund of literature, suitable to every taste, offers students the opportunity to increase in knowledge and to delve into a world of adventure, romance and excitement. They will carry a part of this wonderful world of books into their own worlds, adding a measure of enrichment to them.

Blending our voices

Glee Club members . . . Joan Costa, Helen Liston, Judith Hom, Karen Wilkening, Nancy Falotico, Linda Majewski, Alice Madden, Irene Oswald, Patricia Jacobsen, Marina Glussi, Irene Carrion, Rose Sarlo, Marilyn Jensen, Bernadette Siebecker, Eileen Shanahan, Patricia McCormack, Joan Cawley, Mary Liston, Susanna Carlin, Kathleen Alford, Maureen Schools, Marie Lamanna, Adele Hummel, Linda Luzzi, Jane Horan, Lucille Della Gatta, Barbara Norris, Mary Hull, Margaret Hansberry, Lillian Ortega, Regina Morrish, Loretta Yodice, Mary Houlahan, Barbara Mackiewicz, Ellen Allert, Eileen Carlin, Maureen Sheehy, Linda Siegmann, Madeleine Shaughnessy, Pamela Cassone, Catherine Vaselli, Mary Hainey, Joann Hecker, Mary Ann Mendelewski, Florence Palumbo, Patricia Kronkowski, Linda Cacace, Joan Seufferling, Maureen Brady, Elaine Coffey.

to melodious sounds

Do-re-mi . . . Mr. Schwende gives some pointers to Evelyn Guarco on the art of playing the clarinet.

Music makers . . . Members of the orchestra are Marie Croce, Diane Garcia, Joan Costa, Cynthia Fattori, Mary Hilley, Carol Dugan, Kathleen Dugan, Joan Lipinski, Alice Madden, Hedwig Malinowske, Marina Glussi, Evelyn Guarco, Carla Trovato, and Lillian Ortega. Instructed by Mr. Schwende, the orchestra meets on Monday and Wednesday to further the knowledge of their musical talents. Its members participate in various school activities and as a result of their good harmony and enjoyable music bring credit to the school.

In addition to academic studies, the cultivation of an appreciation for the beautiful is of extreme importance in the education of youth.

Membership in the school orchestra and glee club provides not only a means of developing a God-given talent, but also a social, educational and cultural exchange for those students who actively participate. Through trained guidance, aid is given generously by those who understand youth and its view of the musical world.

The glee club and orchestra's schedule includes participating at Christmas Mass, Graduation, Communion Breakfasts and the Spring Festival. On selected Saturdays, a group of girls devote their time to the entertainment of the sick, disabled, and unfortunate, thus portraying a true spirit of charity. The encouraging response of the audience at these various functions is ample reward for the performers.

An appreciation for good music and a spirit of co-operation among the members aids them in attaining their purpose — enjoyment expressed in song and music.

Graceful finish . . . Ana Maria Loureiro, Joanne Astphan, Lillian Ortega, Nancy Desiderio, Judy Kowalczyk, Patricia Santello, and Barbara Adams end a perfect performance. Sophomore efforts help to make the Spring Festival a success.

Strike up the band! . . . Dancing feet beat out the rhythm as Catherine Jacobsen, Janet Mitchell, Mary Anne McCormack, Carolyn Coffey, Laura Antonioli, Mary Ann Mendelewski, Kathleen Alford, Joan Costa, Susanna Carlin, Mary Ellen Cross, Nora Spinelli, Lynn Nelson, and Geraldine Torre of 301 practice their class dance.

Weekly dancing classes in the regular program of study fulfill several purposes. In addition to offering a welcome change in the classroom routine, this course serves to develop good coordination, to bring forth womanly grace and poise, and to further the exceptional talent which exists in some members of the student body.

Through expert guidance, we are shown that the beauty and expression of music can be enjoyed not only by those in whom rhythm is inborn, but also by anyone who can appreciate the accomplishments of others. We realize, moreover, that the art of dancing is not merely a relaxing pastime, but a vital part of American culture.

Accenting rhythm

1—2—Cha Cha Cha . . . The beat is steady and the pace fast as the 301 Juniors dance to one of the popular songs of the day during the social dancing period of their weekly class.

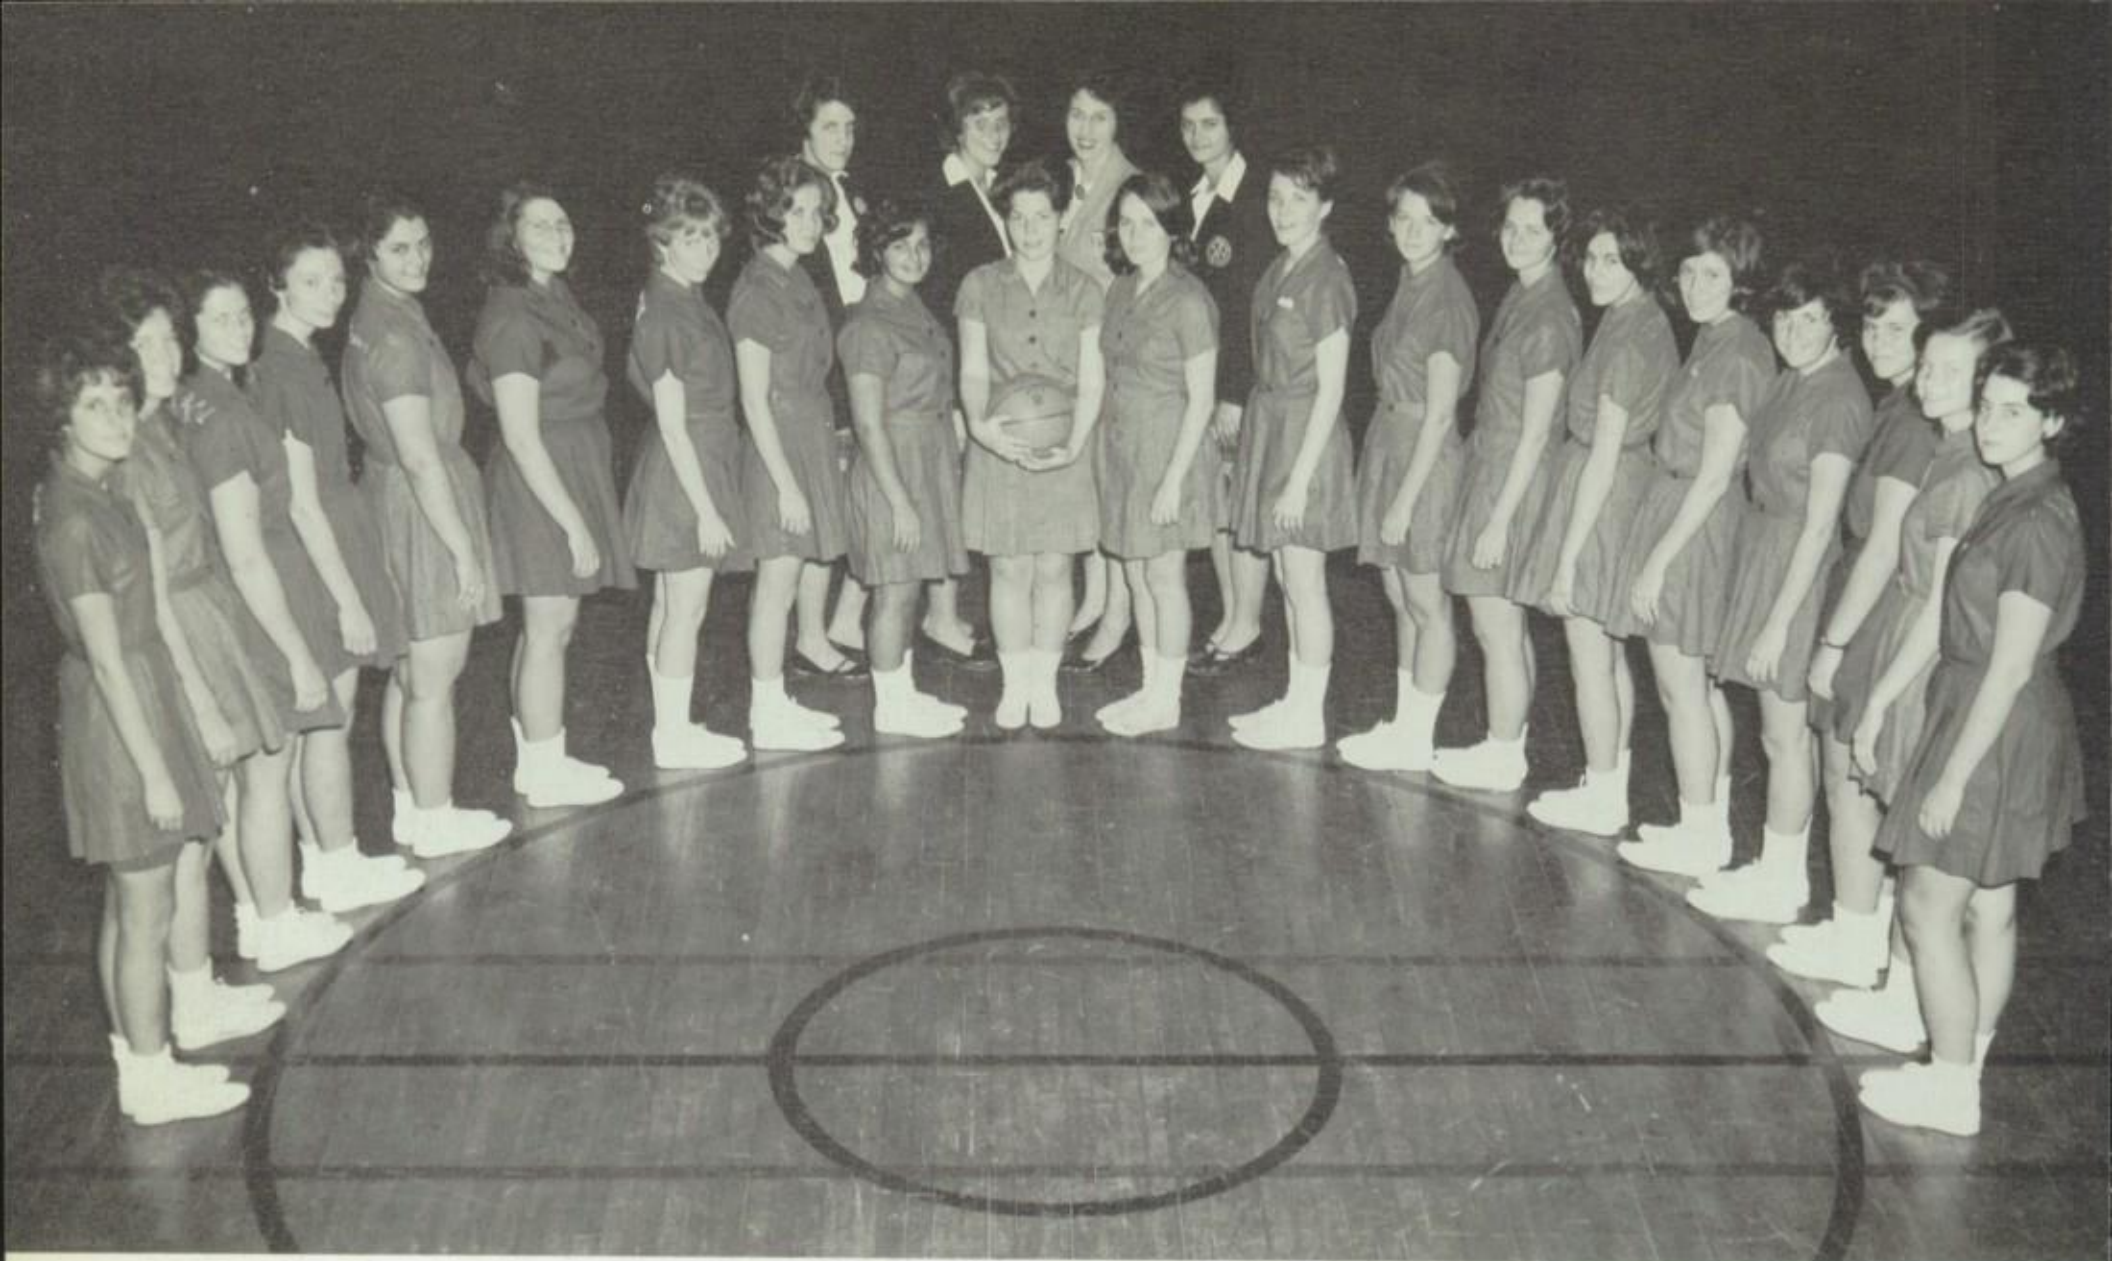

Vaudeville returns . . . With a flourish of straw hats, Carol Kenavan and Julia Richardelli conclude a lively number at our Spring Festival. The unusual nature of their act, coupled with colorful costumes, adds a touch of originality to the annual entertainment.

Southern belle . . . Jo Anne Sparano dresses her talent in a colorful costume. Hard work as well as imagination goes into the preparation of costumes for the annual presentation.

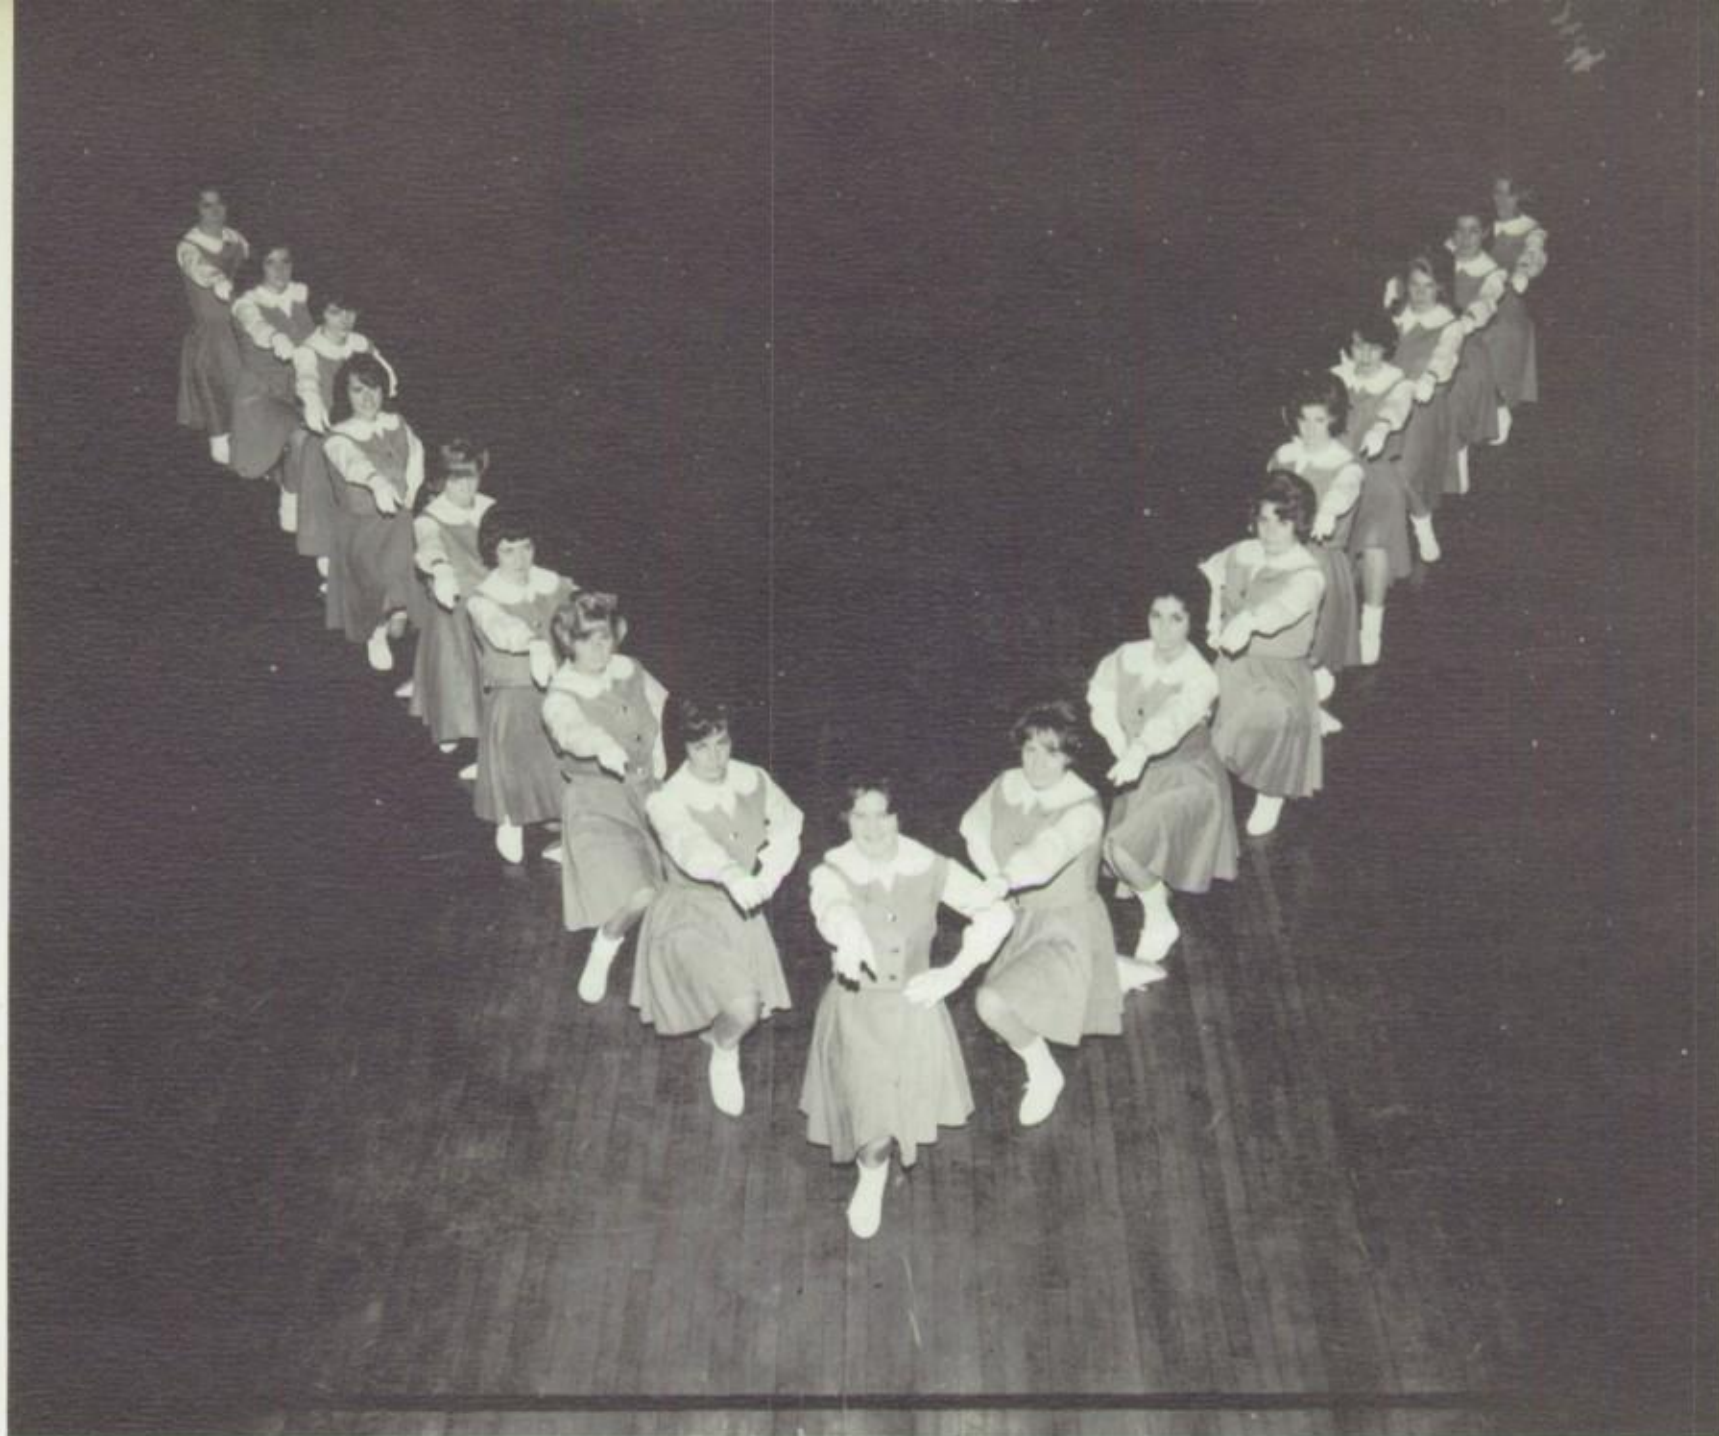

Our team . . . Joan McGrath, Georgene Sheehan, Patricia Egan, Carol Burns, Pat Mazurkiewicz, Delia Lynch, Kathy LaFeir, Cathy Jacobsen, Barbara Scotto, captain Mary Ann Piller, Nora Ashe, Eileen Armstrong, Jeraldine Mitchell, Evelyn Lacey, Margaret Long, Linda Cassidy, Catherine McNicholas, Kathy Flynn, Mary Ellen Cross, Cynthia Brody, Patricia Carten, Christine Xuereb, Mrs. Gruschow, and Christine Mazurkiewicz.

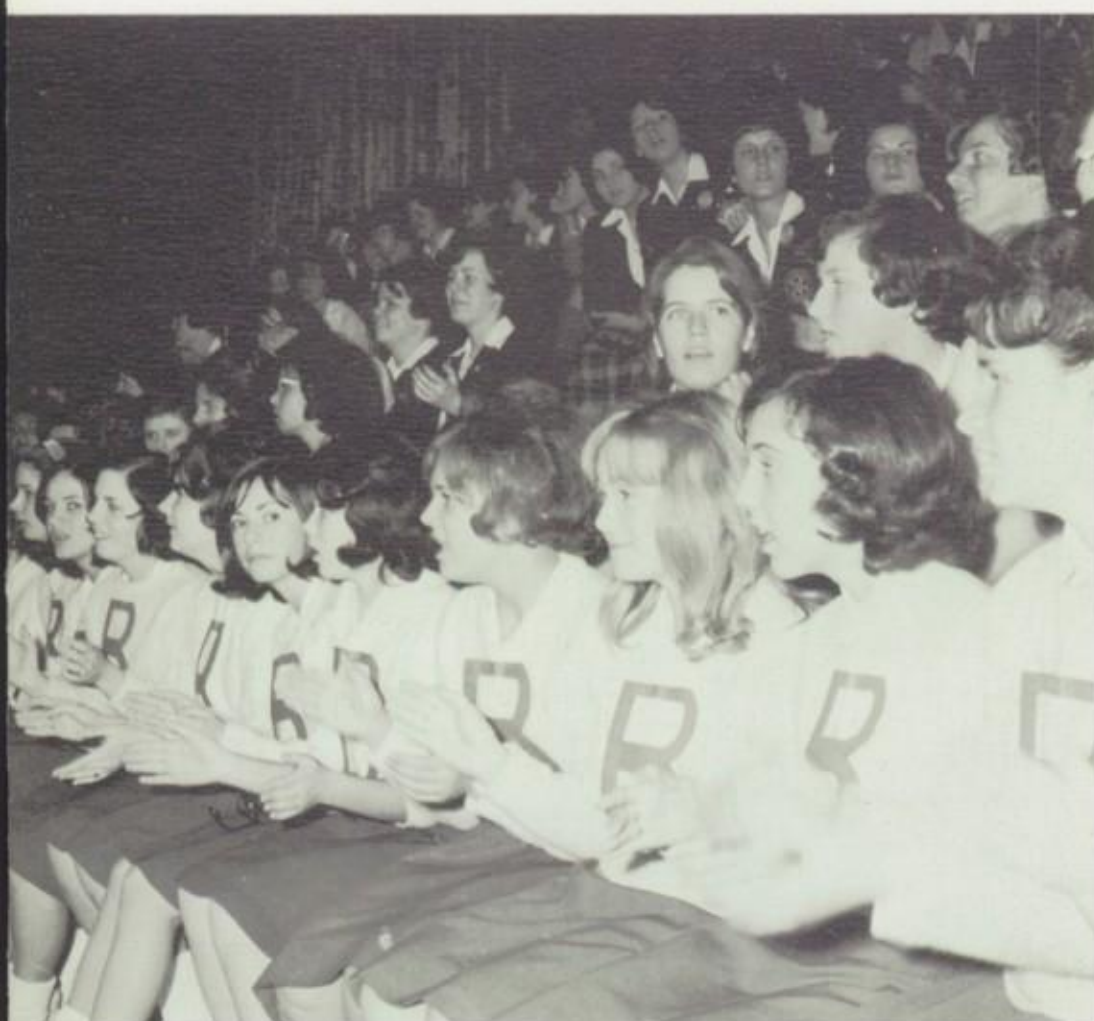

Over the top . . . Mrs. Schwende's expert guidance helps 103 seniors put their physical fitness program into practice. With Mrs. Schwende and Diane Koehler at her side, Anne Marie Sharp prepares to exercise on the parallel bars.

Developing coordination and teamwork

V for victory . . . Mary McCarthy, Marie Piccioli, Eileen Anderson, Mary Jean Barrett, Joanne Davis, Barbara Cooney, Maureen Campbell, Catherine McCullough, Catherine Connor, Janet Drivick, Patricia Castaldo, Rosemary Trotta, Mary Lynch, Michael Smith, Kathleen Mitchell, Louise Mogilnicki, and Mary Ellen Dudar begin a popular cheer.

In answer to the request made by our late president, John F. Kennedy, to organize invigorating physical fitness programs, Our Lady of Perpetual Help, like many other high schools, has developed an extensive and rigorous athletic program to be followed by all students.

Through the use of modern equipment provided for students, gym classes take on a wider dimension as students acquire the ultimate goal of sports education . . . the development of a strong character.

Whether striving for that basket, or aiming for that strike, O.L.P.H. students soon learn that the successes of our sports programs are not solely determined by our victories over opponents, but rather, by the team spirit and good sportsmanship displayed by the girls.

With this in mind, our girls openly compete with "vim and vigor."

OLPH Lettergirls . . . Although they may not cheer our team to victory until next year, boosters learn the skills of good cheering during a home game.

Golden dreams . . . The school ring symbolizes an important step toward maturity, for it marks juniors as upperclassmen. Linda Savini, having attained the sparkling sign of a student's prestige, proudly displays it.

The pink-red hue of the stone and the sparkling shimmer of the gold band seem to glow more brilliantly as the senior ring is placed on each hand. This coveted ring offers the recipient entrance into the exclusive world of maturity. In exchange, she must earnestly endeavor to prove herself worthy.

It is, therefore, fitting that the future senior be given a day which is entirely her own — a day on which she may choose entertainment to her liking and which will remain in her memory forever.

Ring out the news . . . Juniors solemnly pass through the rectory on their way to the long-awaited ring ceremony to be held in the church. Serious faces signify the importance that the occasion has for them.

From that day on, a student learns that her school ring means loyalty — loyalty to her Creator, loyalty to her parents and teachers, but most important, loyalty to herself.

Symbolizing graduates' love

Fulfillment . . . After three long years of waiting, Virginia Earle receives her senior ring from Father Renehan and Father Funk. Accepting the ring, she realizes a new sense of responsibility and loyalty to the school.

Taking a turn . . . Diane Johnson follows a long-established custom as she turns Mary Keane's senior ring. The seniors recognize this custom as an expression of congratulation and good luck.

Ready and waiting . . . The scene is one of frenzied activity as one hundred and twenty-five seniors, laden with luggage, try to find both their friends and the right bus. Arlene Duffy, Maryann Marano, Barbara Anthony, Linda Lopez, Frances Glespen, and Marisa Bacchia, however, seem to be pretty well organized.

Memories, memories, memories stir in every senior's mind when she daydreams about the wonderful weekend she spent in our nation's capital. Departing in an atmosphere of giggling girls and excited hearts, the bus made its way along a scenic road. Arriving at Washington, D. C., everyone was greeted by the splendor of the famous city. They toured lovely parks and avenues beautified by famous monuments. On a crisp autumn day, the girls visited the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, the Capitol, the White House, and many other historic buildings. Numerous mementos from great events in history were presented to them on their visit to the Smithsonian Institute. The one thing, however, which predominates in the girls' memories is the fun and frolic enjoyed in their hotel rooms at the Woodner. Mischief lurked everywhere. With tired feet, happy hearts, and many memories, the seniors returned home.

Viewing our country's heritage

Late arrivals . . . After having their names checked on Mrs. Kenny's passenger list, Joan Grigonis, Eileen McConeghy, and Margaret Johnston wave last minute good-byes to friends as they board the Washington-bound bus.

Hold it! . . . Pausing a moment on the steps of the Capitol, Caroline Johnston, Kathleen Mitchell, Maureen Deevey, Eileen McConeghy, Kathleen Lawler and Marie Brazzoli pose for a picture before joining their classmates on tour.

Just in time . . . The strains of music and the gay sounds of laughter welcome Lorraine Rice and her date, Theodore Eliopoulos, to the Senior Dance as they ascend the stairway. The couple catch a glimpse of the fun-filled night and are assured of a most enjoyable and memorable evening.

Recalling a lovely memory

Party preparations . . . In happy anticipation of the pleasant evening ahead, Maureen Campbell, Kathleen Babstock and Mary Jean Barrett, members of the dance committee, add the final touches to the decorations for the Senior Dance.

Dancing the night away . . . Arlene Duffy, Regina Quinn and Maureen James enjoy dancing with their respective partners Charles Howard, Louis Imbriala, and Lee Nilsen to the entertaining music. Feet sway in unconscious harmony with the rhythm of the songs as the night passes all too quickly for these happy seniors.

One of the events which every student at Our Lady of Perpetual Help anticipates is the Senior Dance. On December 13, 1963, sparkling seniors, accompanied by their nervous escorts, waited in line to greet the members of the faculty who were on hand to wish all present a most enjoyable evening. From there, the couples proceeded to their tables. Festive Christmas decorations displayed throughout the auditorium and the fashionable multi-colored dresses enhanced the picture as the couples danced in harmony with the music. Boys and girls, pausing for a few moments between dances, refreshed themselves with the soft drinks and snacks served by junior hostesses. At the stroke of midnight, the last strains of music subsided, leaving only the wonderful memories of an affair not soon to be forgotten.

In a world of their own . . . Caroline Pelletiere and Dennis Bell take a minute to reflect on the pleasantness of the evening. From their happy expressions it is apparent that they are both having a wonderful night and hope there will be many more like it.

Cutting corners . . . Mary Ellen Jennrich, Dorothy McNamara, Patricia Castaldo, Janet Molloy and Theresa Evans exchange smiles while cutting galley sheets. This work is a necessary step in the production of a newspaper.

Informing

Amid a room cluttered with papers, scattered photos, and spilt ink, the members of the Co-Redemptrix assemble to combine their talents in an effort to produce a good school paper.

A source of gossip, current school events and coming fashion fads, the quarterly issues of the Co-Redemptrix are anticipated and appreciated by the whole school. This activity is an outlet for the members to display their varied talent, originality and excellent writing ability. Its success can be attributed to the exceptional literary work of the staff members who well deserve the many awards they have received.

Meeting a deadline . . . Mary Lynch, Pat Mazurkiewicz, Margaret Keaveny, Chris Mazurkiewicz and Jeanne Zink are typing rapidly in order to complete the articles for final appraisal. Speed and efficiency are necessary in preparing the copy for the next issue.

... and encouraging thought

Detecting errors . . . Lynn Nelson, Frances Glespen, Marisa Bacchia, Patricia Kronkowski and Josephine Scoblete proofread the galleys in search of possible errors. Careful attention must be given to these small details. The finding and correcting of mistakes may be tedious but the staff members perform the task willingly in an effort to produce a first rate newspaper.

Exercising creative ability . . . Ann Kennedy makes a rough sketch of the Madonna and Child for the next edition of the Co-Redemptrix.

◀ Taking shape . . . Members of the editorial staff, Michael Smith, Marisa Bacchia and Josephine Scoblete, are adjusting the paste-ups for the next edition of the school paper. They must be accurate in arranging the columns to insure a perfect set-up. In planning the format, the girls realize the importance of having calm assurance and an alert mind, essentials to the printing of a worthwhile paper.

Presenting our Ideals

Preparation for Ikon 1964 begins with a zestful smile, an eager wit and an impatient imagination.

Strong cooperation is evidenced among the yearbook staff members. They recognize the value of preliminary efforts in careful planning as the important details of each layout are slowly brought into focus. As the inevitable deadline rapidly approaches, accuracy is of great importance in carefully checking captions, typing manuscript copy and proof-reading galleys.

This single volume captures the delight in the progress of learning and the charm of growing loyalty which is visible in each student since the first exuberant days of her high school years.

Every bit counts . . . Mary Ellen Dudar, Georgene Sheehan, Veneranda Abbruzzese, Kathleen Rapcinski, Patricia and Christine Mazurkiewicz and Margaret Johnston are busy compiling a list of the donors to The Ikon. Members of the business staff are aware that without these generous contributions to our yearbook, The Ikon would not be the memorable publication that it is.

Words and numbers . . . Josephine Scoblete, Michaele Smith, Patricia Castaldo and Frances Glespen look over the dummy to find out the number of words to be used in the captions for which they are responsible.

Intent at work . . . After carrying out her task of writing the theme headings for the various spreads, Josephine Scoblete checks the number of words she has written against the space provided in the dummy.

... in Ikon 1964

Behind the scenes at Ikon . . . Elaine Coffey, Caroline Johnston, Jane Vaccacio, Mary Pine, Elizabeth Hannon, Rosemary Jacobsen, Michaelae Smith, Frances Glespen, Lorraine Wilantewicz, Josephine Scoblete, Patricia Castaldo, Marie Brazzoli, Maryann Fama and Lynn Murray are members of The Ikon staff who helped to make this year's book a reality. These editorial writers fully appreciate the tremendous amount of work that must be put into The Ikon if it is to be a success.

Fun in fund raising . . . It's a day at an O.L.P.H. cake sale as Roberta Farrara and Linda Savini hungrily purchase a student-baked cupcake from salesgirls Marie Brazzoli, Rosaleen Gallogly, Mary Ellen Dudar and Rosemary Trotta. All proceeds from this enjoyable senior project will go toward the missions.

 In Loving Memory of
 Mrs. Elizabeth H. Kenna

Queen for a night . . . Maryann Fama and Rosemary Trotta gaze upon the glittering crown that is to grace the head of the Prom Queen. When the name of this lucky girl is chosen, she receives the crown and gloriously reigns throughout the night. Maryann and Rosemary silently contemplate the wonderful evening that will be theirs in only a year and perhaps secretly imagine themselves as future Queens of the Senior Prom.

Exchanging ideas . . . As preparations for Class Night develop, the spirit of eager anticipation shows itself on the faces of committee members Patricia Morris, Maureen Campbell, Elizabeth McVite, Eileen Murray, Joan Grigonis, Mary Doherty and Linda Hanvey. My Best Pal
+ Buddy,

This last year of high school for you, I really seemed like mine. Listening to all your experiences at O.S. and remembering about mine.
Of course we cannot forget the egg diet. I know you really liked that.
Maybe when you come home from college I'll have a new diet.

don't find yourself a fella and slope, (you can just get a fella and find someone for me) you don't have to worry about me I won't slope, I promise that you can be in the wedding, party. (I sure you have it in writing).
side. I hope we always remain good (best gal + buddies) friends.
Love from the girls whose secret
you kept very well, better know as when I ring your bell "ME"
(Dots!!!)

To Maryanne (My future sister-in-law?)

Frankly speaking, let's talk about a frankly wonderful subject. Let me see. Ah yes! Rocky. Morally, so how's Frank. He's learning quickly. He must find you Pete's services for the night. I'll have Andy to keep me busy. As you proposed, in a few years let's take a casual stroll up 86th St. & pick up a few fellows. The Del Monaco trip. I'll never forget that one Chemistry class we sat together at. I must admit it was funny. Just remember, I wanted to erase the answers to those questions, a practical Catholic I be, but you didn't want me to. So --- we know who's the virtuous one nowadays. Good luck up at the University & remember to drop down some time for a chat. Frankly ending this letter, take care & be good!

Love

Nathy Patrucci

(I dropped Pete completely)
You can have the Del Monaco name. Good of me isn't it.
